

The initiation of President Hoover's practical plan to end the depression has already made conditions better. Public confidence is putting an end to hard times.

RETIREMENT OF PRATT AND STOLL SEEN STEP TO HOLD OFF CONGRESS

Force Out Officials,

BREACH IS WIDENED
BY BRUTALITY PROBE

Plans Are Made to Effect
Shake-up in Higher-Ups at Various Precincts.

The District Commissioners are prepared to force the retirement of Maj. Henry G. Pratt and Inspector Louis J. Stoll from the District Police force, it was learned authoritatively last night by The Post. The Commissioners are said to have been assured that after such action is taken the probability of a congressional investigation into police affairs here will be lessened.

Everything is ready to terminate the tenure of the two police officials, as well as to shake up the commanding personnel in the various precincts. The changes and the retirements will take place before November 1, it is said.

When the changes have been made, the District Commissioners have been assured of support from a Capital newspaper against a congressional inquiry. Promises have been given the Commissioners, it is reported, that the newspaper will use its influence to assuage the public "hysteria" which was caused by the "third degree" investigation, as well as to cease "sniping" at the Police Department.

By Commission Order.
Under present plans Inspector Stoll will be retired by an order of the Commissioners. Since he is more than 60 years of age an examination by the medical board is unnecessary. The order will automatically place him on half pay.

Retiring Maj. Pratt, however, presents another problem. Maj. Pratt is 58 years of age and it is necessary that he be declared physically unfit to continue in office. This detail, however, is to be taken care of by an examination of his eyes, which have been giving him trouble in recent years.

Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, in a recent speech at the Willard Hotel, declared that Maj. Pratt was "one of the best in the country," and if he ever had to pick a successor, Commissioner Crosby said, "it would be difficult to find one as competent."

Breach Is Widened.
Maj. Pratt's attitude on the "third degree" investigation has tended to widen the breach between him and the Commissioners.

It is said about the District Building that when the grand jury reported its findings in the Stoll "framing" case the Commissioners tried to shift the burden of the recommendations to Maj. Pratt, which he refused to take, since the recommendations were made to the Commissioners. However, the Commissioners shifted the burden to two separate "committees," one to investigate and another to try if the investigating board found trials of the men necessary.

The newspaper official who has been in conference with the District Commissioners in the past few weeks on the proposed shake-up sought to interview President Hoover, after The Post, in an exclusive story, told of the hearing of a prisoner in the First Precinct. He was unsuccessful but told his story to one of the President's secretaries.

Visit Was Discussed.

He was with Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer and Corporation Counsel William W. Brice, when the visit of those officials to President Hoover was discussed. Subsequently, he has been in conference with the Commissioners on several occasions during which the proposed retirement of the two police officials was discussed.

Before Commissioner Crosby went on his vacation to the Pacific Coast.

British Rum Ship Taken in New York

$70,000 Cargo Found on Captured Craft After Chase.

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—After a short chase, during which only blank warning shots were fired, the 125-foot British motor vessel Whichone was captured off Fire Island today by the Coast Guard patrol boat Chahogue.

The vessel, reputedly supply-rum-running craft outside the 12-mile limit, carried $70,000 worth of Scotch whisky malt.

Her captain, Chesley Anderson, and ten members of the crew were taken to the barge office late in the day and then transferred to Brooklyn for arraignment in Federal court.

Coast Guardsmen said the Whichone was capable of carrying twice the cargo of 20 50-gallon barrels of malt with which she was found, valued at $50,000. She frequently had been observed outside the 12-mile limit, they added.

Cleric Offers Prayer Over Bier of Inventor

Scores File Past Casket for Last Look at Edison; Burial to Be in Orange Tomorrow;
Hoover Plans Undecided.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)
West Orange, N. J., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—For a brief moment at midday today mourners stopped a continuous file past the bier of Thomas A. Edison—a minister offered a prayer.

The invocation was uttered by Mrs. Edison's pastor, the Rev. Arthur A. Brown, of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Orange, at her request. He repeated it at 5 o'clock and planned to utter it again at 8 a. m. noon and 5 p. m. tomorrow.

Mr. Edison's body lay in a bronze casket in a niche of the pine-paneled, high-ceilinged library of his laboratory. Autumn leaves covered the bier.

Dr. Brown mentioned in his prayer the name of John Ott, 81, who died of shock on learning of Mr. Edison's passing. Mr. Ott was an Edison pioneer, having worked in the inventor's laboratory for a half century.

At the sundown service Dr. Brown read briefly from the Book of Ecclesiastes.

"This man," he said, "was also touched with the Spirit of Jehovah. . . . In him were all the elements that go to make the man of God. His death was fulfillment of his valuable life."

He then recited Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar."

The funeral will be at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday at Glenmont, the Edison estate, with burial in Rosedale Cemetery at Orange.

The Rev. Stephen J. Herben, who while pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Orange, from 1912 to 1916, enjoyed a close friendship with Mr. Edison, will conduct the funeral service unassisted. He now is pastor of the First Methodist Church of New York.

TWO SLAIN WOMEN SECRETED IN TRUNK

Dismembered Bodies Found in Los Angeles Station Furnish Mystery.

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Dismembered bodies of two women of undetermined age and identity were found in trunks tonight by police at the Southern Pacific Railroad station.

The headless torso of one of the women was in the small trunk. The two heads, the other torso and the amputated arms and legs were in the other. Police said the trunks came from Phoenix, Ariz.

The women were consigned to a Los Angeles man whose name the police refused to reveal pending an arrest.

A woman called at the baggage room at noon today to claim the trunks, but employees had become suspicious because of a strong "odor" wafting from the trunks.

One of the slain women apparently was in the early thirties with dark hair. Her face had been beaten and was unrecognizable.

The other, whose body had been hacked into pieces, was younger, apparently about 20 years old, and had red hair. She had been shot and her face also had been crushed as though in a deliberate attempt to prevent identification.

Senator Swanson Secluded in Hotel

Visitors Barred by Doctor
After Illness While Presiding at Fete.

Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Senator Claude A. Swanson, of Virginia, was kept quiet in a hotel room tonight following an indisposition while presiding at the Yorktown Sequenentennial Celebration today.

While his condition was not considered serious, Dr. Calver, United States Senate and House physician, said he must rest in absolute quiet. Friends in the vicinity were not permitted to see him, but during the afternoon he was visited by Marshal Petain and members of the French delegation, who presented him with a gold medal in token of their appreciation of his part in the celebration.

Dr. Calver said the senator's illness probably was due to something he had eaten.

Hurley Takes Definite Stand On Islands' Freedom Issue

San Francisco, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Definite recommendations for or against Philippine independence will be made to President Hoover by Patrick J. Hurley on his return to Washington, the Secretary of War announced late today as he returned from Manila on the liner President Hoover.

Just which way the recommendation will be Secretary Hurley, crisply but smilingly, declined to say.

"I went to the Philippines to investigate on orders of the President of the United States," he explained. "I will make my report to him."

Secretary Hurley planned to communicate with Washington tonight and to leave for the Capital tomorrow by airplane. Mrs. Hurley, who accompanied him on the trans-Pacific tour, will return East by train.

The Secretary of War went to the islands to investigate general condi-

Unprecedented Optimism by Its Economic Review
Cheers U. S. Experts.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.
Sighting a rift in the clouds of depression for the first time in two years, the monthly economic review of the American Federation of Labor reported yesterday that underlying factors in the business situation "unquestionably are gradually improving."

The optimistic note in this particular review was doubly welcomed by Government experts for the reason that the labor index always gives great weight to the scale of employment.

Simultaneously, Government officials who have been holding the stethoscope to the Nation's economic heartbeat for several weeks pointed to half a dozen factors on the business horizon indicating a broadening spirit of optimism.

Halling a firmer tendency in commodity prices as evidence of continued buying, the A. F. of L. review also emphasized the general restoration of financial confidence following organization of the National Credit Corporation, suggested by President Hoover as a means of liquidating slow banking assets.

"Debits are being paid off," this review continues, "replacement demand is accumulating, consumer industries continue to increase production."

"There are influences which create business recovery. It should be remembered that they are progressing steadily, although certain other factors prevent them from becoming fully effective."

At the same time, reports to the Federal Reserve Board told of an encouraging laxing of the tendency to hoard cash and this improvement has served to ease the credit situation in at least two important centers.

Equally significant, reports from the steel centers indicate an increasing volume of business for the first time in several months. Contract awards for concrete reinforcing bars last week, for example, were the largest in 30 weeks. And this type of business reflects generally an expansion of construction operations.

Although this increase in steel business is scattered geographically, its accumulated effect is reported to have exerted a controlling influence upon market sentiment in Wall Street. Several important operators who three weeks ago were pounding the market down with alarming intensity have been eased.

DR. HAVENNER MADE HEAD OF '02 FEEBARE

Appointment Is Expected to Silence Criticism

DIRECTOR GIVES HINT
HE WILL QUIT BODY

Finance Report Says $100-000 Only Half Enough for Celebration.

The District George Washington bi-centennial commission elected Dr. George C. Havenner as its executive vice chairman at an executive session late yesterday afternoon. Dr. Havenner will have complete charge of the District's participation in the celebration and will supervise the work of Arnold Kruckman, director of the District commission.

Mr. Kruckman was the target last week of an attack by Sol Bloom, director of the Federal bi-centennial commission. Mr. Bloom charged the District director with tampering with the celebration by selling concessions for the sale of various articles in the District connected with the celebration. Members of the District commission have refused to believe the charges against their director and the matter was not discussed at either the open or executive sessions yesterday. Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, chairman of the District commission, assured reporters.

Will Smooth Relations.
Appointment of Dr. Havenner to a position in which he will have complete supervision over the District commission plans to smooth out the strained relations with the Federal commission, in view of the fact that any business conducted with such groups will probably be conducted by Mr. Bloom and Dr. Havenner.

Mr. Kruckman, who departed when the executive session was called, told The Post late last night that he had not been fully informed of what had developed at the closed meeting. He displayed considerable interest in the position to which Dr. Havenner has been appointed, but explained he could not say how it will affect him until he is given more details.

"I received an indirect notification of what had taken place, that is, I was told that Dr. Havenner's appointment was a 'better man for the place,'" he said. "You see, he was just twenty days out." Asked what he meant by this remark, Mr. Kruckman rejoined, "Draw your own conclusions. The director would not say whether Dr. Havenner's appointment would mean his resignation, but it seemed to be the opinion in some quarters that this would be the case."

No "Personal" Feelings.
Mr. Bloom said that he had no personal feelings in the matter. "Our hearts should be free from hate and spite," he said, "and filled with brotherly love." Mr. Bloom added that he was principally interested in cooperation and had no desire "to see Mr. Kruckman ousted."

Representative Bloom expressed himself as "pleased and gratified" with the selection of Dr. Havenner. "I can work with Dr. Havenner and I am sure he can work with me," he said. "We have been friends for years. They could not possibly have chosen a better man for the place."

He said he thought there was "no question" but the action of the commission would result in less friction between the two groups.

"There has never been any real difficulty. It was simply a question of whether we should work together. I felt we could not divorce the work of the two commissions. Heretofore they haven't worked with us. That is all."

Experts Policy Revision.
By continuing the practice of "selling" concessions, the District Commission never would have realized over $5,000, Representative Bloom declared. He said he is convinced now that he will abandon the practice.

"If their legitimate expenses are met, their funds Congress undoubtedly will feel it has an obligation in the matter," he said. "After all, the District, entertaining guests from everywhere, will incur expenses much higher than those met by the District Commission."

He said he favored Dr. Havenner.

SNARE CLOSING AT YORKTOWN; NATION IS BORN

By EDWARD T. FOLLIAARD

Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19.—The trap was sprung on Lord Cornwallis again here today. Tonight Yorktown was American territory, the Revolution was over and the independence of the colonies was sealed.

It is true that today's Cornwallis was a young Army officer—Lieut. Paul L. Singer, of the Thirty-fourth Infantry—who was doing his best to seem natural in a red coat, a pair of skin-tight pants and a powdered wig.

It is true, too, that today's George Washington was also a young Army officer, a tall, big-nosed lieutenant by the name of Bovey M. Hall, who, it might be said, felt a good deal better than did the pseudo Cornwallis.

It is true, moreover, that the cannonading, the wild charges of the Americans and the French against the British and the Hessians, and the actual surrender scene itself—it is true that all of this was simply part of a big show, a pageant enacted by officers and men of the United States Army stationed hereabouts.

Yet, so vivid, so crowded with color and action and stirring sound was it all, that a throng of 40,000 which included President Herbert Hoover and a host of other international celebrities, was transported back 180 years, back to that other October day when the French-American trap actually was sprung on his lordship.

Grumbling Seems Cheap.
Somehow, the cynicism and grumbling that are now so rife in the land seemed cheap and unworthy of Americans in this atmosphere of rampant patriotism today. And President Hoover, in his speech, seemed to sense that fact.

The President, who came here on the U. S. S. Arkansas, and whose ears still must be ringing with the 300 shots that were fired in his honor as he moved up the York River, was the orator of the day.

He stood at the base of a vast horseshoe arena that had been formed on the field of surrender here. In front of him was a veritable convention of the world's well known, gathered for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the battle of Yorktown.

The President said that it was doubtful if the struggle for independence would have been won without the aid of the French.

JAPAN DROPS PROTEST UPON U. S. AT GENEVA; PEACE HOPE BRIGHTENS

Manchurian Accord to Give to Delegates.

PLAN'S ACCEPTANCE
CONSIDERED LIKELY

Chinese May Soon Enter Into Direct Communication With Japanese.

Geneva, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Aristide Briand has formulated a proposal to deal with the Manchurian conflict which he will present to the Chinese and Japanese members of the council of the League of Nations.

This proposal, which is sufficiently flexible in form to serve as a basis for negotiations, is to be advanced in behalf of the council, with which Prentiss B. Gilbert is sitting as a representative of the United States.

It was understood after the private council meeting today that the formula to be advanced by M. Briand, the chairman of the council, in talks with Dr. Alfred Soong of China, and Kenkichi Yoshikawa, of Japan, contains some feature which each party can reject to relieve its own feelings.

In addition, it was said in informed quarters the very vagueness of the Briand suggestions eliminates the possibility of deadlock.

Gives Rise to Optimism.
The Briand proposal, coupled with other factors, gave rise to a feeling of optimism in league circles. The Chinese and Japanese delegates were described as showing a more friendly attitude toward one another.

From Manchuria came reports that were called more cheerful, notably news that the branch railroad between Mukden and Hailu had resumed operations, which was interpreted as a sign that things were more nearly normal.

Japan was said to be adopting a more tempered attitude toward the league council, and the council learned that in the "war" there have been some contacts between Chinese and Japanese diplomats.

In authoritative quarters here it was expressed that both China and Japan would recognize the acute danger in the situation and would settle their trouble before an explosion destroyed the possibilities of peace.

Willingsness Is Seen.
Willingsness to accept the league's good offices in supervising security in Manchuria behind retiring Japanese troops was seen in Japan's latest communication, a note issued to the council and subsequently considered by the council.

On the other hand, China was described as being fully conscious of the danger to her people and it was predicted the Chinese might soon be ready to enter into direct negotiations with Japan with some form of league cooperation.

Japan's note, after reciting the Japanese version of the roots of the conflict, continued thus:

"The Chinese government has given assurance that it will protect our nationals and their goods. Japan is extremely pleased with this excellent intention, but she has still some hesitations regarding its realization, especially in the present overextended state of China herself."

Most Fortunate.
"The League of Nations, we are told, would be ready to assume the entire responsibility for the security of our population and their properties after the retreat of our troops. It would obviously be most fortunate if the league could find a way to accomplish this."

The lives of hundreds of thousands of Japanese people and their goods are entirely too important to permit the Japanese government to run risks which now, unfortunately, are too evident.

"The Japanese delegation ardently hopes that the council, considering the situation in the light of realities, may assist through its deliberate and calm action, its confidence in Japan's good will, and a just appreciation of the circumstances, a real appeasement which is desired by all, and this will be in the eyes of the world a striking proof of the moral authority and beneficence of the League of Nations."

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Jeers from Lawrence's 22,000 striking textile workers were the answers to the factory whistles which invited them back today to the work they have left in protest against a 10 per cent wage cut.

Marching columns of pickets, summoned from their beds by trumpets and horns, shouted derision as the whistles blared their notification that the plants of the American Woolen Co., Arlington Mills and Pacific Mills were open for those who wanted to return.

Lawrence's 150 policemen with 35 more from Lowell patrolled the streets about the mills, but only one arrest was made. A man was taken into custody for clubbing a workman about to enter a mill. The three companies invited the strikers back after Gov. Joseph B. Ely suggested the men return to work with the agreement that they be given increases in wages as soon as business conditions improve.

ANNAPOLIS STIRRED
BY HOOVER'S SLIGHTMayor Sends White House Protest Over Failure to Receive Welcome.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Failure of President Hoover to recognize an official welcoming party here Saturday when he passed through on his way to Yorktown, today led to a formal protest to the White House and abandonment of plans for a welcome on his return trip.

The protest was entered in the form of a letter which Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt directed to the President, asking for an explanation of his failure to recognize the welcoming party consisting of himself and officers of the Annapolis club.

"There will be no welcome when the President passes through tomorrow on his return to Washington from Yorktown," Mayor Quenstedt said. "We went to considerable pains to arrange the reception Saturday and failed to obtain even a nod from the presidential party."

May Publish Letter.

The mayor declined to make public a copy of his letter to the White House.

"If a satisfactory explanation is not forthcoming from President Hoover, then I will make public my letter and the answer made to it," he said.

"I made arrangements for the reception with Col. G. C. Brecher, of the Secret Service, who said he was the President's civilian aide. He fixed the hour of arrival and the point at which we were to meet the President," President Hoover, Admiral and Mrs. W. V. Pratt and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, went through Annapolis Saturday on the way to Yorktown. Roads to board the U. S. S. Arkansas, which took them to the Yorktown Sequelential celebration, where the President spoke today.

Salute Held Illegal.

When the presidential caravan reached the designated meeting point it slowed down, but before Mayor Quenstedt's party could reach Mr. Hoover the machines gathered speed and went on, the mayor complained.

At the Naval Academy the presidential party was received by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent, and a salute of 21 guns. It was revealed today that the salute was illegal, the President's party not arriving at the Academy until 5 minutes after official sunset. Regulations forbid salutes after sunset.

President Hoover's schedule calls for his arrival at Annapolis Roads aboard the Arkansas tomorrow morning. He will follow the same route through Annapolis toward Washington that was traversed Saturday. Any necessary arrangements will be made in regard to traffic, the mayor said, but no official will take part.

Quenstedt, a Republican, and an attaché of the Naval Academy, is serving his second term as mayor.

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—George Graham Rice, elderly broker, on trial for alleged evasion of an income tax of $1,800,000 in 1925, asked a Federal court today to summon Attorney Max D. Steuer, former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and other prominent witnesses.

Rice, who was brought from Atlanta Penitentiary, where he was sent for a stock fraud involving the cost of $25,000,000, said he was "too poor" to engage an attorney, and acted as his own counsel. He said he had spent $1,300,000 on legal defense against "persecution by the Federal and State authorities and the New York Stock Exchange, over a period of four years."

Rice moved that the court provide traveling expenses for 125 witnesses, including Joseph P. Tumulty, of Washington, secretary to the late President Wilson.

Assert Hoover Group Will Manufacturers.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The Hoover credit pool was hailed tonight by the directors of the Advertising Federation of America as the mainpring that will release many new products now held back by manufacturers due to the national credit situation.

They expressed the belief that the pool would relieve "a tightness of money which has made it impossible for the manufacturers to step forward courageously, go on active production basis and again put their sales forces to work."

The new products, they averred, backed by advertising behind "aggressive and vigorous selling," would find a ready market with the public, break down the "unwillingness to spend," increase production and put men to work.

NOTABLES AT YORKTOWN ADDRESSED BY HOOVER

Harking back 150 years to the American victory over the British at Yorktown, President Hoover yesterday addressed massed thousands attending the Yorktown anniversary celebration. Listening, in the front row, left to right, are Secretary of the Navy Adams and Mrs. Adams; Senator Bingham, of Connecticut; Mrs. Thomas J. Preston; Marshal Pétain, Mme. Claudel, Gen. Pershing and Ambassador Claudel, of France.

pendence could have succeeded had Washington lost at Yorktown. Certainly, he observed, with the victory at Yorktown American independence was won.

French Help Praised.

Upon France he lavished praise, and this seemed a fortunate prelude to his conference this week with Prime Minister Pierre Laval, of France, now nearing New York.

Recalling how the French fleet of Comte de Grasse whipped the British fleet off the Virginia Capes and then bottled up Cornwallis in Yorktown, and how Lafayette and Rochambeau helped Gen. Washington to complete the trap on shore, President Hoover said that the sentiment then generated between France and America came to full flower in the World War.

The presence of Marshal Pétain and Gen. Pershing here today, the President said, "symbolizes this second comradeship in arms, so magnificently begun by De Grasse, Lafayette and Rochambeau."

This precipitated applause, and brought a look of gratitude to the faces of the Marquis de Chambrun, descendant of Lafayette; the Marquis de Grasse and Maj. de Rochambeau, descendants of the other two members of the great French triumvirate of the Revolution.

No Gloating Over British.

In praising the American and French troops, however, the President did not dwell on the British. He did not gloat over their defeat. That sort of thing went out of style with the old-fashioned history books that used to make school kids grin their teeth when they read about the Red Coats.

Though Yorktown brought American Independence, the President said, it was not essentially a victory over the British.

"The long span of history," the President went on, "will interpret the establishment of a common philosophy of human rights begun at Runnymede."

As a matter of fact, if today's pageant was a mirror of the battle of Yorktown, then neither did Gen. Washington gloat over his victory here. A tableau that followed the surrender scene today showed Gen. Washington tendering Lord Cornwallis a dinner.

In concluding his speech today the President, in effect, used the past glory of the Nation as a lash to whip courage and confidence into weak-kneed Americans of today.

Obstacles Not New.

"While temporary dislocations have come to us because of the World War," he said, "we must not forget that our forefathers met similar obstacles to progress time and again, and yet the Nation has swept forward to ever increasing strength."

"The unparalleled rise of America has not been the result of riches in lands and forests; it sprang from the ideas and ideals which liberated minds and stimulated the spirits of men."

"In those ideas and ideals are the soul of the people. No American can review this vast pageant of progress without confidence and faith, without courage, strength and resolution for the future."

If those who were listening in on the radio are still wondering why the President halted in the midst of his speech, the answer is that a capricious wind blew his manuscript from his stand. It was retrieved by Secretary Theodore Joell.

President Hoover came here today amid such pomp and color and noise as even he, world citizen that he is, could hardly have experienced before.

The Arkansas moved up the York

River at 8 o'clock this morning, steaming past a line of twelve cruizers, the waterweights of the Navy. Each vessel had broken out a chain of international flags a city block long, and on each the crew was manning the rail.

As the Arkansas passed by, each cruiser loosed a 21-gun salute in honor of the President. This the Arkansas band answered by playing The Star Spangled Banner.

When it seemed that the Arkansas band must fall from exhaustion, it suddenly changed its tune, and played that stirring French anthem, the Marseillaise.

By this time, the two French cruizers, the Duquesne and the Suffren, were booming out a salute to the President.

A few minutes later, and the Arkansas was dropping anchor near the Constitution, that 133-year-old frigate of which Oliver Wendell Holmes made a sea-going shrine with his "Old Ironsides."

Colorful French Visitors.

Amid much booming of guns, Vice Admiral A. L. Willard came aboard to pay his respects, and after him Marshal Hector Pétain, accompanied by Ambassador Paul Claudel and Warren Delano Robbins, the State Department's official escort of dignitaries.

Marshal Pétain came out to the Arkansas in a little blue gig from the stern of which flew the French tricolor.

For a man who has seen as much carnage as he has, the "Saviour of Verdun" seemed mild. He is short, a bit stout and has kind, friendly eyes.

Much more warlike appeared Rear Admiral Desportes Zenon, who came over from his flagship, the Duquesne, with Marshal Pétain, has a pair of moustaches, which, if they were curled in pirate fashion, would frighten Long John Silver himself.

President Hoover, who, with his three secretaries and Assistant Secretary Ernest Lee Janke and Senator George Moses, of New Hampshire, had been standing on the superstructure doffing his slush hat as the salutes rang out, went to his cabin to receive Marshal Pétain.

Arrival of President.

The 19-gun salute that was fired by the Arkansas as the French delegation left the Arkansas was not for Pétain, but for Ambassador Claudel, who presented him. An ambassador ranks 19 guns, a marshal, like a full general, 17.

Leaving the Arkansas, the President came ashore in the admiral's barge. Here in old Yorktown, he found a strange intermingling of the colonial and the modern—Gov. Nelson's ancient house and along the road outside it a group of hot dog stands; soldiers dressed in khaki and others in uniform, a century and a half away, uniforms that would be seen a mile away.

The President came on the surrender grounds escorted by a squadron of cavalry. He was accompanied by Senator Claude A. Swanson and Gov. Pollard. He and Mrs. Hoover were given an ovation as they took their seats.

Also there was Maj. Fritz von Steuben, collateral descendant of Baron von Steuben, the German drillmaster who whipped Washington's men into shape, and a delegation of Polish officers invited here in memory of the contribution of Pulaski and Kosciuszko.

Ambassador Wilhelm von Fritzsche, of Germany, and other diplomats, as well as the thirteen original States. Also there were several members of Congress, but they were small fry here today.

Former First Ladies.

In their stand in addition to Gen. Pershing and Marshal Pétain were three former first ladies of the land—Mrs. T. J. Preston, who was Mrs. Grover Cleveland; Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

After the President had delivered his speech Senator Swanson presented him with a gold medal in recognition, not only of his services to his country, but of his services to mankind.

Mrs. Hoover also was presented with a medal.

Thereupon a recess was taken, and the President and Mrs. Hoover went to a tent that had been assigned to them. Later on, at an official luncheon, President Hoover received a degree of doctor of laws from J. A. C. Chandler, president of William and Mary College. In accepting it, President Hoover praised Virginia hospitality and recalled that the State had given the Nation six Presidents of the United States.

It was at this luncheon that Senator Swanson suffered an acute attack of indigestion and had to be taken to his hotel.

After the luncheon the President returned to his stand on the surrender ground.

For days, the allied French and American forces had been battling the British here. Today was "armistice day" in the American Revolution, and the big scene was the surrender. Only the surrender field paraded, in blue and buff, led by Gen. Washington on a spirited charger. Then came the French, attired in everything from green to lavender, and led by Rochambeau and Lafayette.

The American and the French lined up on either side of the field, leaving a broad aisle in the center. Through this presently came a file of British red coats headed by Gen. O'Hara, Lord Cornwallis's proxy at the capitulation.

Approaching the group of allied officers, Gen. O'Hara went up to Rochambeau and offered him Lord Cornwallis's sword.

The Frenchman, instead of taking it, motioned him toward Washington across the way. Whereupon O'Hara guided his horse toward the American commander.

Proffered Sword Returned.

"Gen. Washington," he said, "in behalf of Lord Cornwallis, who is ill—"

He got no farther. Gen. Washington motioned him toward Gen. Lincoln. The latter accepted it, but promptly returned it. A lusty cheer arose at this point.

Immediately after the surrender scene, the field was cleared of troops, and a screen was thrown around a stage which had been set up on a stage in front of where President Hoover sat.

When the screen was removed, there was revealed a group of American, French and British officers gathered around a table. This was a reproduction of the banquet tendered Lord Cornwallis by Gen. Rochambeau by Gen. Washington.

While these actors sat at the table out on the field, a pageant worker led the crowd what it was all about.

The toast that Lord Cornwallis gave to Gen. Washington was repeated, as was the toast that Washington gave to the British.

At the end, one roasting toast rolled over the field. It was: "The United States of America."

After this came a pageant, symbolizing the growth of the country. Indians, pioneer farmers, railroad workers and other groups successfully moved across the stage. As the rail workers came out to swing their picks, a quartet sang:

"I am working on the railroad,
All the live long day;
I am working on the railroad,
Just to pass the time away."

This phase of the pageant wound up with a scene that might have been entitled "Flaming Youth." A hundred or so young people, led by Demos in the guise of Liberty, charged out on the field, loosed a lot of confetti and then broke into a community jazz dance.

The "Spirit of America" took exception to these goings-on, as she appeared suddenly on the stage.

"Is that what we fought for?" she asked.

After this came a parade the like of which probably won't be seen again until Yorktown celebrates the 200th anniversary of its capture.

Celebrated Troops March.

The famous Richmond Blues, of Virginia, the equally famous Fifth Regiment of Maryland, which fought in the Revolution, and the celebrated Putnam Phalanx of Connecticut strutted past the grandstand in all their colorful glory, their standards and their plumes whipping in the breeze.

Past the stand, too, marched contingents of French sailors with their white hats topped by brilliant rosettes.

Gen. Laval would have felt that mighty good had he heard the cheers that greeted these boys.

The American Legion also was represented in the parade. A contingent that attracted particular attention was the legion drum and bugle corps from Wilmington, Del.

Two things attracted attention to this outfit, the drum major and the commander. The drum major was of the old-fashioned type, a wizard with his baton. The commander was Tom Miller, who used to be alien property custodian, who had an unfortunate experience and who is now staging a magnificent comeback.

Leaving the pageant grounds, the President and his party went immediately back to the Arkansas and the trip to Annapolis began. From Annapolis the President was to go to Washington by motor.

Assistant Secretary Janke left the party here and traveled back to Washington by airplane.

Meyer and Mills Visit
Federal Reserve Bank

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, visited the New York Federal Reserve Bank today and met with various officials of the bank.

Their visit was described as of merely "routine" nature.

S. S. Ile de France, En Route to New York, Oct. 20 (A.P.).—Two plans, one political and the other financial, were completed today by Premier Pierre Laval, of France, and his experts in preparation for the discussions between the premier and President Hoover in Washington.

Details of these plans were withheld, but they were described as having been designed in such a way as to embrace both the minimum and maximum possibilities of Franco-American action.

The French experts completed for the premier a vast collection of facts and figures for his use in the Hoover talks. These data provided the bases for the financial and political plans, which, it was said, have not been linked together, but are intended for separate consideration.

M. Laval, it was again emphasized, is going to Washington with an open mind, keeping always before him his duty to France.

The premier's daughter, Mlle. Joe, who has been assisting him as his secretary, was today and yesterday celebrated by playing a losing match in a deck tennis tournament. She will travel with her father by special train to Washington, accompanied by Mlle. Reine Claudel, daughter of the French Ambassador to the United States.

The Ile de France is well on her schedule and, if the weather continues good, should arrive at New York several hours before 9 a. m. Thursday, the time set for the French minister's party to debut.

French Laval today and yesterday he would discuss a possible purchase of wheat by France while in Washington and said such a purchase would be impracticable.

In that regard, he said, France is virtually self-sufficient and there is no outlet in her colonies.

Hoover Calls Yorktown
Victory of New Order

The text of the President's address at Yorktown is as follows:

Quenstedt and My Fellow Countrymen:

No person here present, no school child of the millions listening in on this occasion, needs reminder of the significance of the battle of Yorktown. It is by the standard of battles in which the contrary result would have essentially varied the whole course of history, then it becomes one of the very few decisive battles in the history of the world.

Six years of war for independence had sorely exhausted the resources, depleted the forces, and sapped the support of that group of men whose genius gave freedom to our country. With the invincible mother country had made in subjection of the North American colonies, it is extremely doubtful if the struggle for independence could have succeeded had Washington not at Yorktown. Certainly the victory at Yorktown our independence was won.

In military history, Yorktown is distinguished as one of the great battles in which land and sea forces co-ordinated. The naval cooperation was furnished by France, herself also at war with Great Britain. For that cooperation we have held during these 150 years a grateful remembrance.

That sentiment continuing down through our history, finally flowered in the cooperation which the American people gave to France in their defense against an overwhelming enemy.

The presence of Marshal Pétain and Gen. Pershing here today symbolizes this second comradeship in arms, so magnificently begun by De Grasse, Lafayette and Rochambeau.

Victory for New Order.

We assemble here to celebrate a victory for our own independence, but not essentially a victory over the British. The long span of history will interpret the American War for Independence as a battle for the new in the light of a struggle amongst English-speaking people for the establishment of a common philosophy of human rights begun at Runnymede.

The principles and ideas for which America contended had many adherents and much sympathy in England at that time. The victory of the new order gave impulse to the new order throughout the world; and while the sovereignties of America and England definitely diverged at Yorktown, yet the spirit of the new order was established in England itself.

The common acceptance of many of the ideas and ideals of the English-speaking people side by side for a century of peace, concord, sympathy and devotion to a liberty defined and assured under a reign of law, the triumph of the new order in America strengthened the impulses for liberty in France.

"It is not to be doubted," wrote Lafayette, in sending the keys of the Bastille to Washington, "that the principles of America opened the Bastille."

Our purpose today is to pay homage to a glorious event in our national history, and to the principles offered to us by this ceremony, a new acquaintance with the spirit of George Washington. The campaign which led to its final climax here established his military genius. It was the crown of victory which placed his name among the great commanders of all time.

It is not too much to say that without Washington the victory would not have been won.

Washington Great.

Washington's greatness was far more than a great general; it lay in his soul and character. Of him, in sober, critical judgment, a gifted American historian, James Truslow Adams, has written: "In the travail of war and revolution, America had brought forth a man to be ranked with the greatest and noblest of any age in all the world. There may have been greater generals in the field and statesmen in the cabinet in our own and other nations. There has been no greater character. When we think of him, we are reminded of the unity of Washington, it is not a military leader, nor an executive or diplomat. We think of the man who by sheer force of character held a divided and disorganized country together until victory was achieved, and who, after peace was won, still held his disunited countrymen by their love and respect and admiration for himself until a nation was welded into enduring strength and unity."

HOME SEES CLOSER
TIE WITH GERMAN

Coming Visit of Grandi to Berlin Is Expected to Strengthen Bond.

Rome, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Further collaboration between Germany and Italy is expected to result from the visit of Foreign Minister Dino Grandi to Berlin next week-end.

Grandi will return the call made by Chancellor Brüning on the Foreign Minister Curius at the beginning of August. He will represent Premier Mussolini, who finds himself unable to go until some time this winter. Mussolini has not been out of Italy since 1924.

Two of the problems that were paramount at the time of the German leaders' visit to Rome have since been dissolved, wholly or partly. One was the Austro-German customs union, of which Mussolini told Brüning he disapproved. Another was the prevention of German bankruptcy and the execution of the Hoover moratorium.

Other problems, however, still remain. One is disarmament, and another is the spheres of influence of both countries in the Balkans. Since Mussolini's advent, Italy has kept a keen eye fixed on the Balkan States for in his words "Italy's future lies toward the east."

Italy wishes to build up a friendly bloc in the Balkans to offset the French alliance with Yugoslavia, Roumania and Czechoslovakia.

The Germans also have a keen interest in the Balkans, as demonstrated by their alliance with Bulgaria and Turkey during the World War, and the Berlin-Bagdad railway. How to reconcile the two countries' aims must form an important part of talks between Brüning and Grandi.

In recent years a distinctly friendly feeling toward Germany has arisen in Italy, has been nursed along by the newspapers and has been followed with approval by the government. The opinion has sometimes been expressed that Italy and Germany might again be allies, as they were under the triple alliance in pre-war years.

This national shrine stands for more than a glorious battle. It is a shrine which symbolizes things of the spirit. The victory of Yorktown was a victory for mankind. It was another blaze in the great trail of human freedom. Through these ideas and ideals the minds of a people were liberated, their exertions and accomplishments stimulated.

The primary national consequence of the independence we finally won here was the release of our national mind from all hampering restraints put upon us by subjection to another nation and an older civilization. Here America became free to be America. We acquired the opportunity for unrestrained development of a government and culture that should be our own. It has made possible the realization of those visions of government and organized society which arose among us as a result of individuality of temperament born of the frontiers of a new continent.

Progress in Every Decade.

If we look back over these 150 years, we see our Nation marking progress with every decade. From these communities of 3,000,000 people scattered along the Atlantic seaboard, it has grown to more than 120,000,000. It has marked "the full sweep of the continent to the Pacific Ocean with magnificent cities, homes and farms, with a degree of comfort and security hitherto unknown in human history."

It has grown in education and knowledge, from which invention and discovery have been accelerated, with every year bringing a harvest of new comforts and inspirations. It has unfolded a great experiment in the human spirit, building new and powerful institutions born of new ideas and new ideals, new visions of human relations. It has attained a wider vision of liberty and happiness and more of material things than humanity has ever known before. It has attained a security among nations by which no thought ever comes that an enemy may step within our borders.

While temporary dislocations have come to us because of the World War, we must not forget that our forefathers met similar obstacles to progress time and again, and yet the Nation has swept forward to ever-increasing strength. The unparalleled rise of America has not been the result of riches in lands, forests or mines; it sprang from the ideas and ideals which liberated minds and stimulated the spirits of men. In these ideas and ideals are the soul of the people. No American can review this vast pageant of progress without confidence and faith, without courage, strength and resolution for the future.

A clear blessing of civilization

Having decided that the blessings of civilization really aren't blessings after all, the Tahitians, dwellers in the "Garden of Eden" of the South Sea Islands, have issued a call to their tribe to renounce modern life and clothes, and return to the folkways of their ancestors. Since "going native" is a tempting idea even to highly civilized people, a tropical paradise might easily tempt many of us moderns—until we realized that we would be deprived forever of having our drinking water always delightfully cooled with clear, sparkling chips of American ice.

Of Two New Vick Products

Desire of Makers That Every User of Vicks VapoRub Have a Free Trial of New Vicks Nose and Throat Drops and Vicks Medicated Cough Drops.

RESULT OF RESEARCH

New Discovery Makes Possible New Vick Plan of Home-Control of Colds.

REDUCES "COLD-TAX"

A quarter century ago Vicks VapoRub introduced the modern and better method of treating colds—externally. Now, Vicks Chemists develop a new preparation—Vicks Nose and Throat Drops—based on a new idea in preventing colds. A perfect ally to VapoRub, it makes possible the new Vick Plan for better Control of Colds in the home—and further reduction of the family "Cold-Tax."

Here is the Plan:

1.—Before a Cold Starts.

On exposure to colds or any of the causes that ordinarily lead to colds—crowded indoor places—stuffy, poorly ventilated rooms—sudden temperature changes—wet and cold—that slow down the normal functioning of the nose, Nature's marvelous "first line of defense against colds"—use Vicks Drops promptly. Or, if a cold actually threatens—when you feel that first stuffy, sneezy irritation

2.—When a Cold Strikes.

Use the convenient Vicks Drops during the day—any time, any place—as often as needed for comfort and relief. At bedtime, rub Vicks VapoRub well over the throat and chest and cover with warm flannel. Leave bed, clothing loose around the neck so the medicated vapors can be inhaled all night long. This Vicks Plan gives you a full 24-hour truce against colds. There is a cough, you will like an even better Vicks product—Vicks Cough Drops—actually medicated with ingredients of Vicks VapoRub.

Trial Packages Free.

In order that every user of Vicks VapoRub may try the two new Vicks products now being introduced, a supply of free trial packages of each has been sent to every druggist in the United States. Go to your druggist today and ask for yours. If, by any chance his supply is exhausted, send us the top of a Vicks VapoRub carton—or coupon from the VapoRub directions folder—and we will mail free samples direct to you, together with a folder on the new Vick Plan for Control of Colds in the home. FOX TAX FIGHT CITES LOSSES IN NEW YORK

"What Price Glory" Claimed to Have Shown Deficit on Broadway.

(Associated Press.) The Fox Film Corporation has found exhibiting first-run pictures along New York's Broadway generally to be a losing venture.

It told the United States Board of Tax Appeals yesterday $96,918 was lost on its first Broadway showing of "What Price Glory?"

The corporation petitioned for a determination of $154,564 deficiency in income tax for 1928, assessed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. It reported net income of $4,125,847 for that year.

Bureau investigators increased the amount to $4,598,666, disallowing a deduction of $437,882 credit issued the Fox theaters for securing to the corporation the right to exhibit its new pictures at Roy's Theatre. Several smaller deductions also were disallowed. The corporation argued that the bureau erred.

"The Broadway run," as it is called, is undertaken with the full expectation of incurring a loss from each individual showing and it has been the petitioner's experience that a profit from the exhibition of motion pictures in a Broadway house is practically impossible," the petition said. "Of a total in excess of 50 pictures exhibited by the petitioner, a profit was secured in but two instances."

The corporation said it lost $54,214 in exhibiting "Seventh Heaven," $82,318 on "Sunrise" and $92,401 on "Four Sons." The advantage of exhibiting its pictures at Roy's, it said, was in the advertising received.

The corporation paid $372,887 in income tax in 1928. The bureau held it should have paid $527,461.

Hoover Message Lauds Drug Group in Session

Atlantic City, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—President Hoover, in a message to the National Wholesale Druggists' Association convention today, said the organization "has been a potent influence for improvement of conditions within the drug industry."

J. M. Penland, Dallas, Tex., in his presidential report, said the stability of the drug business was illustrated by the fact that there had been no failures in the wholesale drug business during the year.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 80

THIS is not a picture of the Athletics snapped in a tense moment before that last game with the Cardinals. Appearances are deceiving. The "A's" is for Agriculture and the pennant is for victory. For this is none other than the Department of Agriculture Baseball Club, photographed in their moment of triumph, after winning the Departmental League championship in October, 1906.

Second and fourth from the left, respectively, in the second row you have Sanders and Titus, who twirled the departmental champs to a successful finish 25 years ago. Note their modest and even unassuming demeanor. Laurels rested lightly on brows of the victors in those days.

End of World Held Near, Some 6,000 Years Ago

By JOHN J. DALY

SAVANTS gathered in St. Petersburg, Fla., survey the modern scene, deplore conditions influencing the home and blame the wreckage of so many families on "the unbridled ideas of some of our youths."

The charges are summed up as follows: Congested living quarters of great cities, the high cost of living and the increased practice of living beyond income wreck the modern home.

With no yard or wholesome playground, the average home is simply an abode where the potential gang, in the making, gets together for meals and a place to sleep at night.

The child, growing up in this atmosphere, seldom hears a pointed moral lesson, subtly conveyed, but instead is constantly beset with bickering and discontent between parents whose usual conversation is the need of more money to meet their indulgences and obligations.

Children learn more from their parents at the dining table than in any other place in the home. The evil influences are soon extended, since all they hear is, "Get the money at any price." With this thought instilled, the seeds soon will bear the fruit of dishonesty, immorality and a train of antisocial attributes.

Thus the good doctors paint the picture of depravity. The patron saints of American life are Scarface Al Capone, Joe Goldtooth Wyoming, Twogun Tommy Martin and Shorty Quick-on-the-Trigger Fabian.

What a country! What a life! Ever since it was instituted, the home has been the special charge and care of wise men and women; throughout the ages, throughout the universe. The idea, primarily, is to make all mankind happy and wise, but it has been a long, uphill struggle. On the one hand there is the large and magnanimous, and on the other, the mean, the vicious and the low. In between sorrow and joy there is confusion, always.

If the American home in great cities has come to this pass, life is in pretty bad straits and not getting away from it. The infinite truth of the universe, which is that all men are destined for happiness, seems to have been lost in the shuffle. As civilization advances, with all modern inventions at its command, it seems, according to this estimate, to be going backward.

Well, it may not be so bad as they say it is. To believe that all the conduct now happening has never taken place before is to become somewhat blind to the facts. When the world was in its salad days, green in judgment, it had to compromise with events, as it is doing today. They had no machine guns and probably no roadhouses, but they complained often of the darkness that hung over the home and prayed for a way out, as witness an inscription carved by an Egyptian 6,000 years ago in the Imperial Museum at Constantinople:

"Our earth is becoming degenerate in these latter days. There are signs that the world is rapidly approaching the end. Children will no longer obey their parents, who are giving bad example to their children. Everybody wants to write a book. The end of the world is manifestly drawing nigh."

In the language of football, the world seems always to be thrown for a loss.

will go to Norfolk immediately afterward, if there is time before his Western trip. The office of the deputy administrator at Roanoke and those in North and South Carolina, and West Virginia will be visited later. Woodcock said he did not plan to inspect the Baltimore office, because he is familiar with the situation there.

The district embraces Virginia, West Virginia, the Carolina, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Director Woodcock, who has insisted his men use firearms only for defensive purposes, will attend the trial next week of a man charged with shooting two prohibition agents to death.

Woodcock said he would be only an observer at the proceedings in a State court in Fort Wayne, Ind. His presence will indicate, he added, his interest that the agents, as well as the public, be protected from the promiscuous use of deadly weapons.

John I. Wilson and Walter M. Gilbert, the agents, were slain last July. George Adams, a convicted prohibition law violator, is charged with murder as the result of their deaths.

ROOSEVELT'S BANK APPOINTEE INDICTED

Conspiracy and Neglect of Duty Charged; 28 Officers Accused.

New York, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—State Superintendent of Banks Joseph A. Broderick, a personal appointee of Gov. Roosevelt, was indicted on charges of neglect of duty and conspiracy today by a grand jury which also returned indictments against 28 officers and directors of the defunct Bank of the United States.

Broderick, frequently the object of bitter attacks both by Republican leaders and by Tammany Hall, is charged with having permitted the bank to continue doing business and accepting deposits in spite of his knowledge that the institution was insolvent.

All of the charges on which the banking superintendent was indicted are misdemeanors, though a superseding felony indictment was returned against the four key figures in the bank failure and Herbert Singer, a law clerk, who was involved in the crash.

Broderick is accused of having conspired with Bernard K. Marcus, president of the bank; Saul Singer, executive vice president; Isidor J. Kresel, counsel; C. Stanley Mitchell, chairman of the board; and Simon H. Kugel, vice chairman. The banking superintendent conferred with these men frequently during the months before the bank was closed last December. Broderick was seeking at that time to arrange a merger and forestall the collapse.

The felony indictment named Marcus, Saul Singer, Herbert Singer, Kresel and Henry W. Pollock. The last-named was head of the legal department of the bank and one of its vice presidents. Of these, Marcus and the two Singers already have been convicted of a felony in connection with the bank's failure.

This charge is based on the "$8,000,000 bookkeeping deal" through which, according to Max D. Steuer, special prosecutor in the bank of the United States case, three subsidiaries of the bank fraudulently paid a debt to the bank with the bank's own money.

Most encouraging in the recent surveys of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in the Department of Agriculture, is the fact that cotton cloth shipments from domestic mills—a basic index—have continued at about 3 per cent above current production for five successive weeks. The resultant increased demand for raw cotton has lifted Southern spot prices about a cent a pound during the last ten days. Live stock prices also have advanced notably during the last week. Besides easing the rural credit position, these increases have added millions to the prospective farmer purchasing power, according to the department's reports.

Perhaps the most encouraging note in the fourth-quarter forecasts, published this week is the almost universal agreement that stock prices have at last been squeezed to actual values. This painful process of adjustment has been the crux of the credit situation throughout the East for two years, but the opinion appears to be general now, for the first time since the 1929 crash, that prices bear, for the most part, a reasonable relation to earning prospects. In many cases prices are far below the real values but almost nowhere is the opposite true.

Thus, brokerage sentiment generally favors higher prices, and this feeling is accentuated by a widespread belief that the Interstate Commerce Commission soon will announce some measure of emergency relief for the railroads. Although the commission's decision in the carriers' petition for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates is understood to be still forming, market sentiment inclines strongly to the view that a measure of relief will be announced within perhaps ten days.

CANNON IS CAUSTIC IN REPLY TO MAYOR

Bishop Declares Atlanta's Wet Chief One of Pack Yelping at Heels.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 19 (A.P.)—Mayor James L. Key, of Atlanta, opponent of prohibition and critic of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was described by the bishop today as "simply an addition to the pack which has been yelping at my heels the past three years."

The bishop's statement was made in reply to Mayor Key's suggestion to his interdenominational Sunday school class yesterday that the bishop should be kicked out of office.

Bishop Cannon's statement said: "I have no reply to make to Key's attack upon me. Mayor Key is simply an addition to the pack which has been yelping at my heels the past three years."

(Associated Press.) Doubt was expressed yesterday by Chairman Nye, of the Senate campaign funds committee, that any further inquiry would be made into the 1928 activities of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in view of the indictment of him by the grand jury here last week.

Senator Nye said he would discuss with other committeemen whether to proceed in the investigation into the political activities of the bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Former Actress Seeks Erlanger Estate Share

New York, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—With three of New York's leading trial lawyers drawn into the case, Charlotte Fixel, former actress, today began her court fight for a share in the $75,000,000 estate left by the late A. L. Erlanger, theatrical producer, on the grounds that she was his common law wife.

Mrs. Fixel is represented by Max D. Steuer, Attorney General, and Erlanger estate are Samuel Untermyer and Isidor J. Kresel. Steuer and Kresel for years have been bitter enemies.

CLERIC TELLS STORY
IN HEART BALM SUITBetty Randolph, Actress, Hears Suitor's Plea in Court for $50,000.

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—While a vividly attired actress sat smiling in court today, a former Czechoslovakian priest, Benjamin Chudacek, took the stand in his $50,000 breach of promise suit against her, and said she had broken his heart by refusing to marry him.

He met the defendant, Betty Randolph, he said, after seeing her picture in a newspaper and writing her a "letter of condolence over her troubles."

Ignoring the libel of defense counsel, who termed him a "male flirt," a "religious gigolo" and a "fortune hunter," he testified he became a physical and mental wreck because the actress "failed to show up" on two occasions when he had arranged for their wedding.

Her Story Not Told.

Miss Randolph, in a long flowing gown, a brilliant red coat, a sable neckpiece and a black turban, did not have a chance to tell her story before adjournment.

The letter Chudacek wrote to the actress was introduced. It read: "I have seen your lovely picture in the newspapers, and something tells me I shall take the liberty of writing you. I am single, never married, 44, healthy, 190 pounds, six feet one, and very strong. They say I am a good looking. Well, you shall judge me when you see me. I am a descendant of one of the oldest Czechoslovakian families."

Today, after relating how they went to Miss Randolph's apartment, Chudacek said: "She told me she had been married three times and was now all alone in this great world. She said she wanted someone to save her from night life."

Claims She Proposed.

"She started to cry and proposed to me."

He testified he arranged for their marriage in Greenwich, Conn., June 3, 1928, and September 14, 1928, but she failed to appear on either occasion.

He said he severed his connection with the Austrian Church in 1923, came to this country, and in 1926, became pastor of an independent church he started in Johnstown, N. Y., but resigned so that he could marry the actress.

Richmond Bank's Rate Made Highest

Raise Is Effective Today to 4 Per Cent; Peak in Reserve System.

(Associated Press.)
The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond had increased its rediscount rate from 3 to 4 per cent, effective today.

Action of the Richmond bank brings to seven the number of rediscount rate increases by the Federal Reserve banks in the last two weeks. New York increased its rate twice and it now is 3½ per cent. Boston announced two increases to 3½. Cleveland one increase to 3, and Chicago one increase to 3½ per cent. The other banks which have not announced increases are Philadelphia, 3 per cent; Atlanta, 3 per cent; St. Louis, 2½; Minneapolis, 3½; Kansas City, 3; Dallas, 3; San Francisco, 2½.

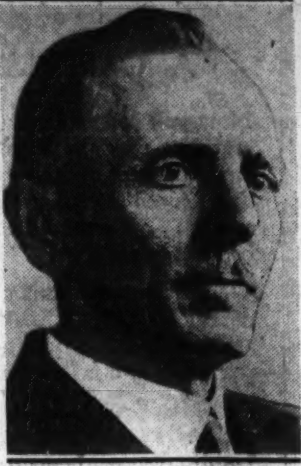

Australian Wheat Crop
Estimated Fifth Less

(Associated Press.)
Estimates that the Australian wheat crop will be 20 per cent smaller than last year have been received at the Agriculture Department. These estimates place the prospective 1931 production at between 165,000,000 and 182,000,000 bushels. The wheat acreage this year has been tentatively forecast at 75 per cent of the 1930 area.

HEAD OF FETE

DR. GEORGE C. HAVENNER.

HAVENNER TO HEAD
CELEBRATION IN 1932

"because he is familiar with District problems and knows Washington business men."

"We can sit down and talk this thing over, and work everything out."

Dr. Havenner was first asked to take the position of vice chairman last spring. It was learned after the executive meeting. He rejected the offer at this time because of pressing work at the Bureau of Efficiency, where he is employed as an investigator. Dr. Havenner was again offered the position by Dr. Marvin last week, and after consulting Herbert D. Brown, chief of the bureau, was assured that he could probably obtain a leave of absence. This leave was granted by Mr. Brown yesterday, to take effect November 1 of this year, continuing until November 30 of next year, it was learned. Mr. Kruckman was employed as director after the first offer to Dr. Havenner was rejected.

Dr. Marvin Too Busy.

Dr. Marvin said that he had been anxious for Dr. Havenner to take over the work, as the bicentennial duties would be more than he could attend to. Dr. Marvin is also president of George Washington University. Dr. Havenner, in the position of executive vice chairman, will assume all the duties assigned to Dr. Marvin in connection with the direct planning of the celebration, but Dr. Marvin will continue as chairman. It was announced.

Dr. Havenner, aside from being an investigator for the Bureau of Efficiency is president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, the author of several statistical works and has had previous experience in exposition work. He represented the Department of Commerce at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915, and investigated the Government Printing Office at the direction of President Roosevelt in 1909.

At the opening session yesterday the commission returned the report of the financial committee, submitted by E. C. Graham, for revision and with instructions that the report be resubmitted at the next meeting.

This report informed the commission that the present appropriation of $100,000 given by Congress for the District celebration is inadequate to cover the program mapped out by Mr. Kruckman, and added that twice the sum will be needed. The financial committee suggested that the money be raised through asking Congress to pass a bill giving the commission the right to make contracts and sell concessions, or that Congress be asked for another appropriation of $100,000.

The committee disapproved a former suggestion to solicit the funds from Washington men, merchants and other citizens on the grounds that they have been asked to contribute enough and that they will be further taxed with expenses when the celebration takes place.

Bride Against Concessions.

W. W. Bride, District corporation counsel and a member of the commission, insisted that the commission should reject for always any idea of selling concessions and that the program should be cut down to fit the funds that are already available. Dr. Marvin offered the assurance that all the plans will be reconsidered after the financial committee has studied its report. The financial committee will work with the executive committee in revising its report and then the entire report will be reconsidered by the commission, Dr. Marvin announced.

Dr. Marvin also made it clear that there is a distinction between concessions and sale of seats for pageants and other events. As matters stand now, the commission is depending on the sale of seats to help meet expenses of the celebrations.

No Extra Session
Is Seen by SnellDemocratic Rumor Denied That Hoover Plans Call for November 15.

(Associated Press.)
Rumors among Democratic House members that a special session of Congress about November 15 is contemplated by President Hoover were denied yesterday by Representative Snell.

The New Yorker, a power among the Republicans, recently conferred with the Chief Executive on legislative matters. Congress will convene in regular session December 7, he said.

Representative Sandlin (Democrat), Louisiana, said it had been persistently reported in his party ranks that Mr. Hoover planned to assemble Congress after November 15 for quick ratification of the one-year moratorium on intergovernmental debts and action on the administration's economic program.

Akron Given Passing Mark;
Sister Ship May Be Started

(Associated Press.)

A second great naval ship probably will be built to take its place beside the giant Akron.

The latter has completed its examinations with a good passing mark, and a recommendation was made yesterday that it be accepted. With its acceptance a contract for the construction of the second ship will become automatically operative unless Secretary Adams, beforehand, takes advantage of a clause under which it can be canceled.

At Yorktown yesterday the Secretary indicated plainly that the Akron would be accepted and said the construction of the sister ship "probably" would go ahead. A report on the Akron's fitness was made yesterday by Rear Admiral George C. Day, president of the inspecting board which put the huge ship through her paces. The ship is somewhat overweight and has failed to develop quite the expected speed. Nevertheless, if Admiral Day's recommendations are carried out, her builders will not be penalized, but will have opportunity during a six-month period to make necessary changes. During this period, the ship will be operated under a provisional acceptance.

As soon as some changes are made the ship will go to her base at Lakehurst, N. J., there to be equipped with machine guns, airplanes, and all the armament she is designed to carry.

GOVERNMENT ASKS $215,000 OF CAPONE

Evaded Tax to Be Collected;
Torrio's Release Denied;
Perjury Hinted.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—More trouble was brewing in the Federal Building today for "Scarface Al" Capone, Chicago gang leader, and his friends.

Capone's sentence on his conviction for violating income tax laws was delayed at least three more days as Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson granted his attorneys until Friday to perfect their arguments for an arrest of judgment.

If this bit of procrastination could be considered as favorable to the gang chief it was more than offset by word that the Government had begun in earnest its attempt to collect the tax Capone tried to evade. The criminal proceeding which resulted in his conviction Saturday night did not alter the Government's claim that he owed some $215,000 in tax, and whatever can be traced to his ownership may be seized.

Torrio Held on Subpoena.

Johnny Torrio, Capone's friend and predecessor as head man of the city's gangs, went up to the U. S. district attorney's office today and asked to be released from the subpoena that brought him from New York three weeks ago as a Government witness. He did not testify for either side during the trial and he said he wanted to go home.

But the Government officers said "No," and it was subsequently learned that Torrio's grand jury testimony was being checked carefully with perjury. He is "Two Gun Louie" Alterie, now a Colorado ranchman, and prosecutors said Torrio would undoubtedly face a similar charge if his testimony were found to have been untrue.

D'Andrea Sent Back to Jail.

Capone's companion and bodyguard, Philip D'Andrea, made another brief appearance in Judge Wilkerson's court as his contempt of court hearing was continued for the fourth time—this time until Thursday. D'Andrea, who had been with Capone constantly during the latter's income tax trial, was found with a pistol on his person at the end of the first week and has been in the county jail ever since. Judge Wilkerson has been ready four times to hear reasons why D'Andrea should not be cited for contempt, but he has refused to hear motions for his release. D'Andrea was sentenced immediately after his lawyers have gone through the formality of making the arguing motions Friday. Judge Wilkerson stated after the jury had convicted the gang leader Saturday night, that he would deny the motion for arrest of judgment, but he later said the lawyers could argue the point if they were for a new trial, the court said.

Term Release Speculation.

What Capone's sentence may be was a matter of speculation, especially in the court of Judge Wilkerson, who refused to take into consideration an agreement for leniency on the basis of his original plea of guilty, even though it was sanctioned by the Attorney General.

The longest sentence ever handed down in a similar case was the five-year term given Jack Guzik, Capone's business manager. Guzik was given two years on each of two felony counts and one year on a misdemeanor. Capone was found guilty on three felony counts and two misdemeanors. The possible maximum under Capone's conviction, in addition to a $50,000 fine, is five years for each of the three felonies and one year for each misdemeanor.

Capone was convicted on five counts and acquitted on eighteen, a fact which has made the later moves of counsel somewhat uncertain. As the verdict was not a complete victory for the Government and not so detrimental as it might have been to Capone's interests, neither side apparently likes to run the risk of what it has gained in its attempt to get more.

Plan Would Trade Capone Freedom for Jobless Aid

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—Magistrate Edward Carney, who sentenced Scarface Al Capone here to his first prison term, today proposed 10 years' probation for the Chicago gang chieftain, on condition he donate $200,000 or more of "his riches" to the unemployed.

The Government ought to bargain with Capone, the magistrate said. "He was not convicted of murder or anything like that; but for evading income tax payments. Make him give some of that money. He is supposed to have to the unemployed. Place him on probation for 10 years on condition he will give a large sum to thousands of men out of work who could use the sum he owes Uncle Sam. Probation for that length of time would be just the same as being in jail. It would prevent him from being active in the racket."

Wilma Wigginton Effects, And Mystery Phial, Found

in Ascertaining How She Met Death.

Finding of the shoes, stockings, undergarments, and a handbag—containing a small phial partially filled with a dark fluid—of Wilma Wigginton, 35-year-old Roanoke, Long Island, woman, on the beach at Point Patience, Md., two and one-half miles above and across from Millstone Landing, where her body was washed ashore last Friday, along with fresh details as to her actions up to almost dark Thursday, are expected to prove important links in the final determination of St. Mary's County authorities of the manner of her death.

Glyde Dove and Nolan Webster, of Solomons Island, found the missing articles of apparel, absence of which had contributed a mystery angle to the woman's death. They had begun a search of the beach at Point Patience after it was learned that the woman had been seen a short distance away from the shore there by J. M. Roberts, manager of a summer hotel there.

A woman, strongly identified as Miss Wigginton, was said by Harry Woodman, proprietor of a store on the road between Solomons and Point Patience, to have made several minor purchases in his store less than an hour before she was seen by Roberts furtively walking along a woodland path. While buying a package of cookies and an orange, she made several inquiries as to the title at Point Patience which she was told had been running high for several days. Both Woodman and several others who were in the store at the time heard the inquiries, but beyond noticing the woman appeared slightly agitated, did not regard the queries as unusual. Leaving Woodman's store, the woman, believed by all present to have been Miss Wigginton, walked along the Point Patience road toward the shores of the Patuxent.

A Post reporter yesterday learned that Miss Wigginton specifically requested George Elliott, proprietor of the garage at Solomons where she stored her car on Wednesday, for a claim check for the vehicle. Informed that this was an unusual request, Elliott said the woman said, "I will not be back for the car. Somebody else will come for it." This was regarded as a significant point in substantiation of the theory that the woman intended to end her life.

No steps had been taken early last night to have the phial containing the fluid analyzed. Investigation of the woman's death appeared to be delayed because of the fact that she evidently had embarked on the events leading up to her death in Calvert County, in which Point Patience is situated, while her body was washed up in the St. Mary's jurisdiction.

SUSPECT IN POLICE SLAYING IS KILLED

Three New York Detectives
Are Wounded in Seeking Accused Man.

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—Long sought as a suspected police killer, Enrico Battaglia, 26, was slain today in a spectacular slaying of a west side rooming house in which three detectives were wounded severely. Battaglia's two companions fled unhurt.

The shower of pistol shots which was precipitated by the unexpected arrival of the detectives attracted scores of police and hundreds of spectators. After 20 shots were exchanged in a second floor encounter in the West Seventy-eighth street residence, Battaglia's associates fled across rooftops. Emergency squads surrounded the entire block and searched every house.

Bert Miller, 25, of Irwin, Pa., was seized by officers and taken to a hospital where, police said, two of the wounded detectives, Guido Persano and Edward Will, identified him as one of the gunmen.

Detective James de Parro was wounded critically and his fellow detectives were less seriously hurt. The three detectives went to the house after learning Battaglia was hiding there. He had been hunted in connection with the slaying in September, 1928, of Patrolman Jeremiah Brogan, on guard duty in a hospital prison ward. He was believed to have driven the automobile in which Brogan's killers escaped.

When the detectives started up stairs they were met with a spray of gunfire. One of their first bullets killed Battaglia.

Confessed Killer of 4 Enters Not Guilty Plea

Snow Hill, Md., Oct. 19 (A.P.)—A Yuel Lee, alias Orel Jones, 60-year-old Negro, confessed slayer of Mr. and Mrs. Green Davis and their two daughters, pleaded not guilty to four murder indictments today in Worcester County Circuit Court.

The prisoner was arraigned a few minutes after the indictments were returned against him. He was brought from the Baltimore City Jail, where he had been held since confessing the killings, which took place a week ago Sunday morning in the Davis farm home near Berlin. Attorneys were appointed for the man by Joseph L. Bailey, chief judge of the circuit court. He will be tried on Thursday. State's Attorney Godfrey Child said.

Tiny Flaw Causes Rejection Of Slab on Unknown's Tomb

One little flaw revealed by a magnifying glass has caused the rejection of a slab of marble for the Unknown Soldier's Tomb. Brig. Gen. Louis Bash, Assistant Quartermaster General of the Army, disclosed yesterday that such is the perfection standard for the memorial and ordered the replacement of the slab on which will rest a 50-ton carved block of marble.

"On almost any other project," he said, "the block would have been approved. Because the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is unique, and because it is small and the casual observer will be able to get close to it, I felt we must have as near perfection as possible."

Both blocks were delivered about a month ago. The officer went over the base when it was put in place on the tomb in Arlington Cemetery.

88 CASES REFUSED BY SUPREME COURT

22 Are Accepted; Question of Negro Vote in Texas to Be Reviewed.

(Associated Press.)
The Supreme Court yesterday considered almost everything from Texas primaries to miniature golf courses and decided that 22 cases should be reviewed.

It also threw out 88 cases which it thought did not merit further study. Among the controversies the court announced it would review were:

Rights of the Democratic party organization in Texas to prevent Negroes from voting in the primaries. The validity of the $60,000 fine imposed on Harry M. Blackmer, the Colorado oil operator, for his refusal to come to this country from Paris as a witness in the naval oil cases.

Whether miniature golf courses may lawfully operate on Sunday in Richmond, Va.

The legality of the Mississippi privilege tax on buyers and sellers of cotton and the authority of the cotton and oil corporations to regulate the production of crude oil.

Pitts Review Declined.

The court refused to pass again on the validity of the oleomargarine tax law, and declined to review the conviction in Washington, D. C., of G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of F. H. Smith & Co.

It dismissed an appeal in which a number of citizens, of Seattle, Wash., sought to attack the section of the constitution of that State prohibiting the reading and teaching of the Bible in the public schools.

The court turned thumbs down on three prohibition cases. In these, Edward De Rosa, convicted in Sacramento County, Calif., claimed the indictment was defective. Paul Grafie, convicted of illegal transportation in Salt Lake County, Utah, insisted his truck had been unlawfully searched, and Edna Pargo, N. Dak., protested his punishment was excessive.

Electrocution Insurance.

The court declined to decide a case from Gary, Ind., which sought to collect accident insurance on a person electrocuted for murder with the contention the insured had been placed in the electric chair "against his will and over his protest."

Harold J. Brady, of Granite City, Ill., lawyer, cited to show why he should not be disbursed for giving two checks returned marked "insufficient funds," made peace with the court, which yesterday announced the proceedings will be dropped.

The court stood by its decision holding invalid the General Electric Co. patent on high vacuum tubes, which yesterday announced a petition for reconsideration was dismissed. The suit had been brought by the DeForest Radio Co.

Virginia Blue Law

The validity of a Virginia blue law which puts the ban on Sunday miniature golf will be considered by the court.

Old Dominion statutes make it a misdemeanor to do any work on the Sabbath save in households, or other "work of necessity or charity."

The Broad-Grady Amusement Corporation, owner of miniature golf course in Richmond, brought suit against city officials to keep them from interfering with its business on Sunday.

The Federal court said the law was valid and that it was for a jury in specific cases to decide whether it was being violated.

Careless Motorists Worry Traffic Chief

Automobile owners who act on the theory that some of the questions asked in the new title registration forms were put there just to keep the printers busy are not only making things difficult for the office of the director of traffic, but they are also penalizing themselves, says Director William A. Van Duzer.

A surprisingly large number of applicants neglect to specify the models and years of their automobiles, Mr. Van Duzer reports, with the result that his clerks are unable to compute the amount of personal taxes to be paid by the owners.

High Court Refuses Pitts Bail Release

Habeas Corpus Proceedings Denied Review in Move to Obtain Liberty.

(Associated Press.)
G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of the F. H. Smith & Co., was yesterday refused by the United States Supreme Court a review of habeas corpus proceedings brought to obtain his release from the District Jail on the ground his conviction on a conspiracy charge was invalid.

In his habeas corpus action Pitts asserted that the District of Columbia code contained no statute defining or prescribing punishment for conspiracy. He had been indicted on the charge of conspiracy which he claimed in the District was an offense only under the Federal criminal code, which provided that such indictments could be tried only in "a district court of the United States."

The laws provided for holding such a court in the District of Columbia, he stated, but it had not been set up and he had been forced to go to trial before the Supreme Court of the District. His trial and conviction before that court was invalid, he contended, asserting it had no jurisdiction to try such offenses.

In support of his petition for review in the highest court he declared Congress had deliberately omitted conspiracy from the criminal laws of the District.

The local courts refused to release him from the District Jail on habeas corpus proceedings, holding that his conviction and sentence was valid. Both refused to release him on bail pending an attempt to obtain a ruling by the United States Supreme Court. Justice Butler of the latter court at his summer home at Seana Springs, Pa., also refused to grant him release on bail.

Georgian Holds State Strong for Roosevelt

(Associated Press.)
Word of strong sentiment in Georgia for Gov. Franklin Roosevelt for the Democratic presidential nomination, next year was brought to Washington yesterday by Representative-elect John S. Wood.

Making his first visit to the capital since his election last November, Wood said that if a primary were held now and no Georgia man were named, the New York Governor would carry that State by an overwhelming majority.

COURT WILL REVIEW TEAPOT DOME FINE

Blackmer's Refusal to Give
Up Again.

(Associated Press.)
A $60,000 fine assessed Harry M. Blackmer for refusing to testify in the Teapot Dome oil cases will be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

Blackmer, wealthy Colorado oil man, was wanted as a witness in the trials of Harry F. Sinclair and Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior. He persistently refused to return to this country from Paris.

After the revelation of the circumstances surrounding the leases of the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills naval oil reserves a law was passed which gave the Government power to punish witnesses who refused to come from foreign countries to testify.

It gave United States consuls authority to serve subpoenas on persons residing outside this country and provided that a continued refusal might be considered as contempt. A summons was served on Blackmer, who was supposed to know much of the transactions of the Continental Trading Co., which bought some of the Teapot Dome oil after the reserve passed to a Sinclair company. He paid no attention and continued his self-imposed exile, begun in 1920.

The Government seized $100,000 in Liberty bonds belonging to him. He was cited for contempt and was fined $60,000. The judgment was affirmed by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Blackmer's attorneys appealed to the highest court.

They argued that the law, introduced by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, was aimed specifically at him and the late James O'Neill, another oil man who refused to return from abroad to tell what he knew of the leases.

In the absence of a treaty authorizing such subpoenas, Blackmer said, the consul had no power to serve them in France. Consequently, he added, the court could not hold him in contempt or seize his Liberty bonds.

Almost since the furore over the oil leases during the Harding administration began, the Supreme Court has had some phase of them before it.

HOOVER AT YORKTOWN.

Two thoughts of special importance emerge from the address which President Hoover delivered while standing on the battlefield where George Washington won American independence. The first is epitomized in his declaration that Yorktown was one of the few decisive battles in the history of the world and that without Washington the American struggle for independence could not have been won. The second springs from the conclusion of his address in these words: "No American can review this vast pageant of progress without confidence and faith; without courage, strength and resolution for the future."

With the approach of his 200th anniversary the hearts of the American people are turning to Washington. The whole country can join with President Hoover in solemnly repeating those words of James Truslow Adams, the historian: "In the travail of war and revolution, America had brought forth a man to be ranked with the greatest and noblest of any age in the world." To celebrate the American victory of Yorktown as one of the great events of all history is to eulogize Washington as a masterful statesman as well as a military genius. Yorktown looms great in history chiefly because of the achievements of the Nation that Washington brought into being. The victory of Washington has been the inspiration of virtually every other movement toward liberty that has been undertaken since that memorable October 19, 1781.

It is safe to say that the United States will never outgrow the influence of Washington upon its national life. Everything that has been accomplished since Yorktown has been an expansion upon the foundations laid by that state builder. In this hour of discontent the people can turn to no richer source of inspiration and reassurance than the annals of the Revolutionary period, when the America of today was in the making.

"While temporary dislocations have come to us because of the World War," said President Hoover, "we must not forget that our forefathers met similar obstacles to progress time and again, and yet the Nation has swept forward to ever-increasing strength." How would Washington at Valley Forge estimate the troubles that have cast a spell of gloom over America today? What does this temporary lull in the economic activity amount to, compared with the staggering problems that confronted the American colonies in their struggle for independence? In the light of what Washington achieved, it ought not to be difficult to mobilize confidence and courage to bring the depression to a speedy end. The time is, indeed, ripe for a renaissance of Revolutionary fortitude and perseverance.

CURRENCY IN THE BALKANS.

International trade faces a situation in southeastern Europe which is likely to bring a return of the primitive system of barter, if a solution is not shortly found. Commerce among the various Balkan countries was formerly transacted in their own currency. The pound was the usual medium of quotation and was considered standard. When England went off the gold basis there ensued a distrust of sterling among the people, who remembered the inflation periods of Germany, Hungary and Austria, and shortly they became suspicious of their own and their neighbors' currencies.

Internal transactions were frequently quoted in foreign money and the demand for francs and dollars became acute. The governments sought to maintain the standards of the local currencies by prohibiting speculation. Private traffic in money was made a prison offense in Hungary. As a result of the stringent regulations the supply of foreign money acquired a scarcity value. Even the pound is being sold above its market quotation, and persons who thought they could pay off indebtedness in sterling to advantage, because of its depreciation, have been compelled in some instances to buy pounds virtually at their normal value.

Various ways were devised to substitute foreign exchange values by indirect means. It was possible to send bills and have them collected through the postoffice. Parcels could be mailed C. O. D. from the exterior, so that a package of dollars being sent from abroad could be paid for on arrival. Both these means of acquiring foreign money have been prohibited by law. While these measures are drastic they have resulted in saving the exchange value of the local currencies. Otherwise the national banks would have been ruined.

A remarkable situation, however, is the result. Money values are no longer determined in the Balkans by gold holdings or trade balances, but by the technical impossibility of securing the currency in question. The official quotations mean nothing to the individual who wants to buy pounds or dollars; his problem becomes a matter of their actual value. Money has become virtually a commodity.

FRANCE AND WAR DEBTS.

International debts will be the foremost item entering into the discussions between Premier Laval and President Hoover. Before sailing for the United States Premier Laval made plain that he has no fixed program to suggest to the American Government. But it is well known that the war debts owed by Europe to the United States is the fulcrum about which most of his discussion will turn.

This makes a rather embarrassing situation for France. When the French debt to the United States was funded a few years ago that country was given extremely liberal terms. France was attempting to balance her budget and stabilize the franc. It was feared that if too much outside pressure were added to her domestic problems, France would be unable to meet any of her obligations. Therefore, a debt amounting to $4,230,777,000, including interest, was scaled down to a present value of $1,581,369,000. In other words, the United States agreed to accept 39.7 per cent of France's original debt as payment in full because that amount was considered to represent France's capacity to pay.

Since that time France has strengthened her financial and industrial position. France has become the money center of Europe. The depression has been felt less in France than in any other great nation. The capacity of France to pay has actually increased, while the need of the United States for these payments is much greater than it was when the funding agreement was signed. In spite of this situation, Premier Laval is coming to the United States to ask for further scaling down of the war debts.

Great Britain might ask for a reduction of its debt to the American Government with far more justification than France. Britain was asked to pay not 40 but 70 per cent of the amount owed at the time of funding. Italy's debt was trimmed down to less than 20 per cent of its value. A similar disparity exists in the interest charged the various countries. Britain pays an average of 3.3 per cent; France, 1.84; Belgium, 1.79, and Italy only .405 per cent. Yet Belgium and France are relatively prosperous, while Britain is in the throes of a serious financial and industrial crisis.

By reducing the war debts to the capacity of each nation to pay instead of insisting upon the collection of the entire obligations the United States sacrificed more than half of the sum that was due. A debt of $12,090,667,878 was reduced by the funding agreements to a current value of $5,888,104,000. It is unreasonable to suppose that any of these debts will be further reduced unless it is evident that the capacity of the debtor nations to pay has been substantially impaired.

Conditions in France do not warrant the asking of favors from the United States. Does Premier Laval come to Washington with suggestions that France join with the United States in a sacrifice for the rehabilitation of Europe? How can a nation in France's position ask for concessions unless it is ready to slash German reparations and to reduce its enormous army? Premier Laval will find it difficult to convince the American people that they should shoulder any of France's burdens, but he might find them receptive to suggestions that France and America cooperate in a program to relieve those nations of Europe that are on the ragged edge of bankruptcy.

SPAIN'S RELIGIOUS CLASH.

Spain's new republican government in just six months encountered the stumbling block of all Latin republics—the religious question. It stumbled for a moment, but did not fall, as many have done. With the Cortes in an uproar of anti-Catholic enthusiasm, debate on constitutional restrictions was suspended to vote support to the new government with hearty "vivas" for the republic. It was a remarkable demonstration, combining patriotic fervor with a determination to eliminate not only the ancient and intimate connection between church and state but to eradicate from the national political life the influence of ecclesiastical orders.

President Zamora, who had headed the antimilitary campaign for years and who officiated at the birth of the republic, favored a constitutional provision declaring with all possible brevity and distinctiveness that "no state religion exists." But when the assembly decreed the dissolution of the Jesuitical church orders, adding provisions for the nationalization of their estates, Zamora resigned. His successor was quickly named in the person of Manuel Azana, minister of war in the Zamora cabinet. With the exceptions of Casares Quiroga, the new minister of the interior, and Prof. Jose Giral, minister of marine, the former members of the cabinet retain their positions.

The situation can hardly be considered as clarified by the change. The country continues in a fever of excitement. Anti-Catholic demonstrations took place in many parts as a form of rejoicing over the victory scored in the National Assembly. On the other hand, the strongly religious northern provinces deluged their representatives with messages urging their withdrawal from the assembly. It will require all the business and diplomacy the new government can muster to conciliate the conflicting passions that this situation has aroused.

As usual the religious controversy supercedes all other issues. It is a question that never dies. Mexico passed similar constitutional provisions more than three generations ago, and with the adoption of new restrictive state laws during recent months the old intense feelings have flamed forth anew, to cause trouble and bloodshed. In Rome, the home and center of Catholic authority, a serious break between the Italian government and the Vatican has just been averted by judicious negotiations.

The liberal parties in Spanish politics will be satisfied with nothing less than the drastic action that has now been incorporated in the constitution. The strong Catholic elements in Spain might have been reconciled to the severing of the age-old union of their church with the government, but the radical action against the monastic orders will arouse bitter resentment and may start separatist movements in various provinces. With the recall of the papal delegate and the withdrawal of the deputies from the Basque provinces and Navarre, it is evident that the issues are to be tightly drawn and both the Azana government and the Cortes will be faced with delicate problems that must be adjusted if serious friction is to be avoided.

PREVIOUS DEPRESSIONS

By Dr. ERNEST L. BOGART, President of the American Economic Association, in a Radio Address.

Within the last twenty years the term "business cycle" has come into general use to describe these recurrent circles of good times, speculation and depression, and it is to this cycle that I wish to direct your attention. In every case we have gone ahead too fast in the investment of capital in fixed forms, far in advance of the immediate needs of the country and then have been compelled to pause and catch our breath.

The crisis of 1837 was preceded by the construction on a large scale of internal improvements in the form of turnpikes, steamboats, canals and banks, which were designed to connect the vast region between the Appalachian Mountains and the Atlantic seaboard, to open up new markets both for the Western farmer and for the Eastern manufacturer, and to provide credit facilities for larger domestic trade.

In 1837 this period of expansion and speculation came to an end. The premature investments could not earn their interest charges. Depression in England curtailed the foreign demand for cotton, and in March several of the greatest cotton factors in New Orleans failed. Cotton fell from 20 cents a pound to 10.

The crisis of 1837 was followed by a prolonged depression. Factories and workshops, organized on a boom basis, closed when the demand fell off. Thousands of operatives were discharged and the cities were filled with the unemployed. Poorhouses everywhere were crowded. Several commission houses were broken into by the unemployed and the foot riots were ended only by the promise of merchants to give flour to the poor. It was estimated that nine-tenths of all the Eastern factories were closed.

The crisis of 1837 was one of the most severe and far-reaching in our history, and the depression did not come to an end until 1842. By that time, however, the effects of the earlier excesses had been overcome, weak institutions had been weeded out, and the necessary readjustments to new conditions of transportation and trade effected. Upon the firm foundation thus laid, the natural buoyancy of the people soon built up a more enduring structure of prosperity than any the country had yet seen. So great was the economic development that the fifteen-year period after 1842 has usually been referred to as the "golden age" of our history.

The crisis of 1873 was the result of a too rapid and too uneven expansion. This time there was an overinvestment in farms and railroads. The homestead act, which gave to each settler a free farm of 160 acres, proved an irresistible attraction and drew thousands of farmers onto the Western plains. These pioneers, anxious to improve their new farms, borrowed from Eastern capitalists, mortgaging their lands to them. But many of them borrowed for equipment and improvement more than their farms could earn, and they frequently defaulted on interest and principal.

Even larger amounts of capital were invested in railroads, which were often built in advance of traffic and beyond the frontier of settlement. Between 1845 and 1873 the railway mileage was doubled.

In the cities, factories, docks and buildings were being constructed on an unprecedented scale. Not only was much of this expansion unwise and premature, but it was unfortunately attended by fraudulent practices. In September, 1873, the bubble of speculative enterprise and inflated credit burst, and a severe crisis occurred.

The inevitable period of liquidation was severe and protracted. By the end of 1875 railroads had defaulted on $750,000,000 worth of bonds. A cut of 10 per cent in railway wages was followed by strikes, riotous outbreaks and the destruction of property. It was estimated in October of that year that in the previous twenty months there had been a shrinkage of 25 per cent in the capital employed in mercantile business.

By 1878, however, the depression had run its course, the necessary liquidation had been completed, and the country had entered upon a new period of prosperity.

In describing the crisis of 1893, it is scarcely necessary to recount the now familiar cycle of good times, overexpansion, panic and depression.

The development before 1893 had been uneven and extreme, and the panic of that year had long been brewing. It was attended by banking and commercial failures, railroad bankruptcies, falling prices, reduced earnings, wage cuts, unemployment, strikes, distress and unrest. A depression followed which continued until 1896, after which a revival of prosperity occurred which carried the Nation to the highest standards of living yet enjoyed.

What shall we say of the crisis of 1929 and the subsequent depression? We are now in the trough and experiencing the pains of liquidation and readjustment, but no one familiar with past panics can doubt that the cycle will again run its course and that we shall once more enjoy a greater prosperity. This is the lesson of history.

POST HASTE.

It is apparent that all but twelve of the league's ten recommendations in the Manchurian dispute are acceptable to Japan.

Opposition demonstrations in Germany, Spain, England and Ireland shouldn't go much further if they want to be termed "political unrest."

It may take two years with the best of luck to put Capone behind the bars on income tax charges, yet the press openly speaks of "this rise to illegal millions via the beer, gambling and vice route."

The Associated Press reports from Chicago that "Matt Kolb, gambling and liquor czar of the northwest side, was shot to death today, while the assassin's accomplice grasped the victim's hand in cordial greeting." Gangdom "sentences" are not subject to the law's delay.

The question is inescapable: What is the matter with our judicial system when thousands of persons know of a man's guilt, responsible news agencies circulate, and hundreds of newspapers print what would be criminal libel if untrue, and yet no means of conviction can be found for crimes of which there is common knowledge?

"No basic commodity broke to new low levels last week." How our ideas about optimistic reports have changed!

M. Laval comes with an open mind and no concrete plan, but about the third evening over the tall glasses of whisky, do we hear: "Well, Herb, I have a few ideas, if you insist—"

Business men, bankers and professors are all pretty well convinced from recent experience that bucking economic law and fighting old supply and demand are futile, but they are also discovering that some specific things can be done in the way of a "managed recovery."

France and the United States will confer as custodians of most of the world's gold. What they must confess is that, as world bankers, they have not as yet either the experience or the distributing facilities of England.

Taking no chances, Navy Day will be celebrated October 27, before the budget gets to Congress.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

EVENING SMOKE.

I saw the blue smoke rising from a little chimney stack.

And I knew somewhere across the fields a man was coming back.

The train that bore me westward kept rushing on its way.

But I fancied I could see him as he closed another day.

Fresh smoke it was, I'm certain, for when a fire is old

The wisps that leave the chimney seem thin and worn and cold.

But blue smoke, hale and hearty, informs the weary man

That mother's in the kitchen and supper's in the pan.

Somewhere beyond the woodland I know he trudged along.

A scythe upon his shoulder and on his lips a song:

His day of labor ended, and like as not, thought I,

He's thinking now of steaming stew, topped off with apple pie.

What curious thoughts and fancies beset the homesick man

Who through a Pullman window the landscape turns to scan.

The smoke at evening tells him a husband's coming home

And supper's waiting for him—but he must waitward roam.

You Can't Stiffen Backbone by Sympathetic Pat to the Top of It

By ROBERT QUILEN

ALL things in nature work together for good. Trace the effect of any trait or tendency that is natural in origin and you will find it in some way a benefit.

Observe, for example, the well man's indifference to a sick man's affliction.

The victim of rheumatism wishes to talk about it. He may or may not desire sympathy, but in either case he thinks his ailment worthy of discussion. It is, for the moment, the one big fact in his life. It is a phenomenon. His thoughts dwell on its constantly. He talks about it as naturally as a child talks about a new toy.

But he doesn't talk long—not to the same person. Listeners are bored. Sad stories of affliction depress them. They change the subject or make excuses to get away.

That reaction to tales of woe is so universal and unvarying that it must be natural—and therefore designed for good.

The man with the ailment feels snubbed. If he wasn't fishing for sympathy, at least he resents the denial of it. He pouts. And then wounded pride comes to his rescue. He feels the wrath of a woman scorned. He has made advances and has been repulsed. He will show them.

"I don't want your sympathy," says he to himself. "Damn you, I will get well. I will have my teeth, tonsils and appendix removed. And when I am strong and well again, I shall snap my fingers under your noses. I'll show you."

In this year of grace, human compassion can be trusted to care for those whose need is real and urgent. But human scorn of whining is more necessary and more beneficent than sympathy when the whiner is able to help himself.

In the South there is a class of illiterate share-croppers without hope or desire for independence. They are "furnished" by their landlords. Many of them make no effort to raise a pig or can vegetables and fruit for the winter, for they know their landlord will provide salt pork, meal and molasses to keep them alive. The life-long habit of dependence has robbed them of ambition and hope.

More fortunate Americans are developing a similar character. It no longer occurs to them to fight their own battles. Whatever ill befalls them, they turn to the Federal Government for help. And legions of Government agents are ready to give them advice or public money—in exchange for their liberty.

The thing that endangers America most is not the temporary depression, but the permanent loss of independent manhood. The need of the times is less "Gimme" and more "I'll show 'em."

Ill-Will Toward Japan.

Chicago Tribune.

The United States has refused to join the league, but it makes an exception of an occasion in which Japan is involved. This exception seems to prove that American desire to interfere with Japan is greater than its desire not to have an entanglement in the league. The Japanese will reason that the American ill-will must, upon such proof, be regarded as overpowering. Why otherwise should there be such a reversal of American policy? Why should an American administration take such chances with popular feeling at home if there were not a greater dislike of Japan than of the league in the United States?

Why Penalize the Navy?

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The report that the naval budget has been cut nearly $61,000,000 and that the administration has asked further slashes to reach that amount is to be deplored. All branches of the national defense have been dangerously reduced in effectiveness by postwar economies and congressional neglect. The reduction mentioned involves abandonment of a considerable part of the building program needed to bring the Navy up to treaty strength, which from the standpoint of safety and common sense should be regarded as the minimum standard.

Why penalize the Navy when there are wasteful bureaus and commissions that could be dispensed with to the advantage of the country? Members of Congress should at least take a good look at the list of such agencies and insist that economy must begin with them before they approve further inroads into the country's safeguards.

Mobilizing for Relief.

New York Times.

"On the eve of celebrating a great historic battle President Hoover called upon this Nation to mobilize for an urgent work of peace. His radio broadcast last evening marks the beginning of the appeal for funds and for organization to be made to all the people. The President frankly faces the extent of the need. He bids us prepare for larger contributions and greater efforts than were necessary last winter. But he does not bate a jot of heart or hope, convinced as he is that the multiplied agencies ready to care for those who are in distress through no fault of their own will be able to rise to the emergency and make sure that no cases of misery in any part of the land go unrelieved."

Reed of Missouri.

Springfield Republican.

Former Senator Reed, of Missouri, is in his seventieth year, and so far along in it that he would be in his seventy-second when the next President is inaugurated in March, 1933. This fact places in the correct perspective his presidential candidacy. It can not prove to be more than a compliment paid to him by the Democrats of Missouri. The Democratic national convention, which dismissed Mr. Reed from serious consideration in 1924 and 1928, will find him too shopworn in 1932.

The thought of Mr. Reed as President would be staggering were it necessary to entertain it seriously. As a possible obstacle to the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt on the first ballot, he arouses interest minus the least suggestion of excitement.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Griffs Might Win Next Year, Says Fan, If They Cultivate the Two-Bagger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to be pretty much the opinion of one baseball cognoscenti, that in order to figure as pennant contenders next year the Griffs must improve somewhat in hitting as well as in pinch pitching. In this connection I would like to call attention to the importance of the two-bagger in winning ball games.

It is interesting to note that in the recent world series the triumphant Cards cracked out twelve two-bags against only seven by the Macks. Of three-base hits there were none and of home runs only five, two by the Cards and three by the Macks. By hurting the morale of the Macks pitchers as well as making runs those twelve two-bags hits had more to do than anything else with putting the Cards on top.

The home run may be the big kick of the batting offensive, but the two-bagger is the spectacular swatting spark plug. The thrill of the home run is expressed in a single roar. One thrill follows another with prolonged action and excitement in the wake of a two-bagger. Let a two-bagger be hit in a close game with the bases loaded. There will be racing and chasing in the outfield, with the infielders on their toes while the base runners dig for the plate. The worst grouch in town, if it's his good luck to be a cash customer at said game, will gladly admit that life is worth living, for the time being at least.

Good batting eyes are not lacking in the Griff line-up. If, by an intensive course of training, they could add a trifle to the strength of their batting swing and hit a few more two-baggers than they did last year, I think they might have some show to win a pennant and a world championship next season. Backed up by the opportune wallop of two-base hitters now and then our present corps of pitchers would be sure to give a good account of themselves.

HENRY WARD BLEACHER.

Lady Suggests That Box Be Provided for Unemployment Contributions by Private Guests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I suggest a method for adding to the money that is being raised for the unemployed. My plan takes note of the fact that no matter what the economic conditions may be, mankind remains gregarious, and will gather in knots for amusement. My idea is for every one who does any entertaining, even in a small way, to have a box at every party to receive contributions from the guests—each guest.

No woman, it is submitted, would think of taking up a collection at her party. But if it were to become the custom to have a place for the deposit of contributions for the unemployed that point of delicacy would be avoided. The mere existence of such a place of deposit would be a reminder that much more than the usual check contributions for the relief of distress at the hands of organized charities is needed now. The total of money contributed under such conditions, by reason of its unmethodical manner of raising, would probably be considerable. The box or dish standing on a table near the door would be a reminder, at dinners and parties, that there were folk in distress outside looking in upon the festivity, for the relief of whom those on the inside looking out should do something—even at the cost of some sacrifice.

MRS. A. E. H.

Reader Suggests Coalition of Parties to Work for Restoration of Prosperity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are facing a national emergency this winter. Would it be too much to ask our legislators and political agitators to sink their party differences for a period and again have an "era of good feeling" politically? The vast problems confronting not only this country but the entire world would be made easier of solution if they were not complicated by the now almost obsolete differences of party politics. Except for the tariff, there remains no major issue in the American political arena which makes a sharp line of demarcation between Republicans and Democrats.

Regardless of party, let a coalition ticket for 1932 be drafted by joint party conference, which represents the best man for each position that the Nation possesses. Regardless of party or political considerations, let the forthcoming Congress pass legislation helpful and inspiring to the Nation as a whole, without any log rolling or compromises. These two boons would be immeasurably helpful to business and to the pursuit of "life, liberty and happiness" at a time when they are sorely needed.

Reader Protests Against American Intermeddling Diplomacy — "Mr. Fixit" Not a Good Role for Uncle Sam.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "The Manchurian Question," is one of the kind which it gives me a lot of pleasure to endorse in print.

Surely Uncle Sam covertly directing the policy of the League of Nations in far-off Manchuria is not at all pleasing. And, as you intimate, what I will call the affront to Japan is extremely dangerous. Undoubtedly, as you say, "a precedent is forming which may plague the United States for many years to come." What will happen to the Monroe Doctrine if our Government is to become the Mr. Fixit of international affairs?

Your stand against presumptuous and intermeddling diplomacy in the field of an ill-advised internationalism is in line with the widespread sentiment of the American people.

INSURANCE FOR IDLE FAVORED BY SWOPE

Opposes Governmental Step,
However, to Force Action on Industry.

(Associated Press.)
Even though he looks upon unemployment insurance as only a palliative and not a cure, Gerard Swope thinks some such relief for those out of jobs is "absolutely essential."
He said so yesterday before the special Senate committee studying unemployment insurance systems here and abroad.
The president of the General Electric Co., however, opposed governmental action to force industry to adopt such systems.
The first thing that must be done, he said, is to stabilize employment as much as possible. Then, since a certain amount of unemployment is inevitable, there should be insurance for the protection of those affected.
Swope described the General Electric's plan, under which workers contribute 1 per cent of their salaries and the company gives an identical amount. He said the plan had worked out very satisfactorily, and no employees of his company has been thrown upon the community.
Chairman Hebert asked him if it would be wise to have the Government also contribute to the funds.
"Industry ought to take care of its own problems," Swope replied. He added that unemployment insurance should be applied universally by industry on a voluntary basis.
The committee also received a summary of unemployment insurance plans in operation in this country from Hugh S. Hanna, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, who was assigned to study them.
Of 79 benefit plans affecting 226,000 employees, he said, most of them worked successfully, although he expressed some doubt whether they adequately solved the social problem involved.
The committee adjourned until tomorrow, when former Gov. Kohler of Wisconsin, James Craig, of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and others will be heard.

Aimee Revival Nets Boston Poor $32.41

Special Collection at Closing Service, However,
Adds $908.90.

Boston, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Boston's poor will get exactly $32.41 from the nine-day revival of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, Los Angeles evangelist, plus a special collection benefit of $908.90.
When Mrs. Hutton came here Mayor James M. Curley invited her to split with the public welfare department everything she collected over and above expenses.
The revival, which attracted more than 165,000 persons to the Boston Garden, brought in $23,506.30, according to figures presented to the city hall today by Richard G. Dunn, manager of the Garden. Expenses amounted to $23,441.48, leaving $64.82.
Split $60.50, the poor got $32.41 and Mrs. Hutton the same. At the closing service last night a special collection was taken up after the regular offering for the poor, and this netted $908.90.

Foshay Jury Finishes Fourth Fruitless Day

Minneapolis, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The jury in the trial of W. B. Foshay and six associates on mail fraud charges completed its fourth day of deliberation today without a verdict being reported.
It was announced the jurors would resume deliberations Tuesday at 9 a. m. They have been in custody of deputy marshals since the case began, eight weeks ago.

Robots Make Office Work Mere Pressing of Buttons

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Two thousand new robots, designed to make life in a business office a mere matter of sitting at a desk and pressing buttons, were introduced today at the annual National Business Show.

Wheels, gears and a vast array of gadgets have been combined to create more speed, eliminate noise, take the drudge out of office routine, eliminate the "human element" and make an office as mechanical as a factory.

When the "tired business man" grows weary of pressing buttons to make the robots do his work, he can pull a drawer from his desk and listen to stock quotations or entertain his clients with jazz music.

The concealed radio works automatically, the opening of the drawer turning it on. In other drawers are concealed a waste basket, mail chute and telephones.

Dozens of strange electric typewriters bring robots to the aid of the weary stenographer.

One will write in 60 foreign languages and in 150 English type faces. The writer can pick the type that will best express his mood or sentiments. There is a delicate script for love notes, a code type for secret communications, and cold formal type for business letters. A twist of the wrist changes from one type face to another.

Likelihood of Subpena Fails to Stir Walker Aid

Mexico City, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Russell T. Sherwood, personal accountant of Mayor Walker of New York, seemed unconcerned here today at reports that a process server was on his way to Mexico City, presumably to serve a subpoena on him.

Sherwood, whose presence in New York is wanted in connection with a legislative committee's investigation of city affairs, said he had understood three agents were on the way to Mexico City, but he had not even engaged an attorney.

Charities.

Cleveland, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Friends of Samuel Mather, one of America's greatest capitalists and philanthropists, who died Saturday night, estimated that his estate amounted in value to more than $100,000,000.

Mr. Mather had given more than $8,000,000 to public institutions and charities and two years ago said his will provided for additional bequests of a similar nature.

The will itself has not been opened, however, and Philip R. Mather, a son, said its provisions were unknown.

Mr. Mather, who was 80 years old, made some revisions in the will two weeks ago and gave it, sealed, to his secretary. The funeral services will be held here Wednesday.

Hungary to Hang Bank Robber.
Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Alexander Ondi, 23, who was captured in the act of attempting a bank robbery last Thursday, was sentenced to death and hanged within an hour today. The sentence was passed by a court-martial, for martial law is in effect against such crimes.

Vacuum Tubes.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Trial of a patent infringement suit involving millions of dollars and revolving around vacuum tubes of radio in millions of homes opened today with introduction of highly technical testimony before Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the United States District Court.

The opening of testimony signaled the conclusion of a year of hearings and discussions as to the procedure in trying eleven different patent suits involving the alleged infringing tubes, manufactured by the Grigsby-Grumow Co. of Chicago.

Joint plaintiffs in today's action, a suit in equity, are the Radio Corporation of America, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the General Electric Co., while the Majestic Distributors, Inc. of East Hartford, a subsidiary of the Chicago corporation, is named defendant.

Women Soon To Tell About Travel Abroad

Geographers Will Meet at Mrs. Huntington's Home Saturday.

When the Society of Woman Geographers announce the first meeting of the year it is the signal for the coming of far countries and lands little visited by even the inveterate traveler. At the first of this season's meetings on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Chapin Huntington several New Yorkers will be present to tell of their summer wanderings.

The vice president of the society, Mrs. Grace E. Barlow Murphy, plans to come and assist in starting the society "off to a rousing initial meeting." Mrs. Murphy is the wife of Dr. Robert Cushman Murphy, eminent scientist of the staff of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. As chairman of the group of woman geographers in the metropolis Mrs. Murphy has devoted a great deal of time, the last two years, to the expansion of the society.

While the membership of the society extends from China to England and from Australia to Canada, the headquarters are maintained in Washington and here, at one time or another, comes a large contingent to add their travelogues to the meetings. On Saturday Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton and Miss Ella Yonge, members of the executive council, and Miss Isabel Dodd, secretary of the New York group, will be guests of the society. Mrs. Seton needs no introduction to Washington where her vivid articles lend an important note to the literary scope of the Capital, her most recent one having been published Sunday in one of the metropolitan papers. She wrote of a visit to Indo China, the first white woman ever to visit the particular region.

Miss Yonge is curator of maps of the American Geographical Society. Miss Isabel Dodd will journey down from New York. She is an archeologist of note and spent many years in Turkey and Asia Minor and long was an educator at Robert College, Istanbul.

The advent of the visitors, however, will not overshadow the delightful phase which marks the first meeting of the year—the relating of summer experiences by local geographers who have returned from distant lands. The president, Mrs. Franklin Adams, better known to her literary friends as Harriet Chalmers Adams, recently returned from a year in East Africa and Europe, with several months in the Iberian Peninsula, on which she is a recognized authority.

Caroline Benedict Carroll is just back from the interior of Yugoslavia and the Islands of the Aegean and the majority of the members, through the summer have "ditted somewhere" so that all will have interesting tales to tell.

Other active members of the Washington group include Dr. Florence Bascom, geologist; Elsie Bell Grosvenor (Mrs. Gilbert E. Grosvenor), world geographer; Alice Tisdale Hobart, specialist on China; Muna Lee de Munos Marin, of Porto Rico; Dr. Laura Hatch Martin, geologist; Sophia A. Sauerman, assistant geographer, Department of State, and Dr. Helen M. Strong, chief of the geographic section, Department of Commerce.

Mrs. Huntington, who will be hostess Saturday, was the society's president last year and is now editor of the society's bulletin, which serves as a medium between groups throughout the world.

Boasting a large membership, and surely a personnel to lend interest to any club group, the society also has an associate membership in Washington. Among the members are Mrs. Anne Archbold, who this summer went abroad; Mrs. Charles M. Hendley, Mrs. John Walker Holcombe, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Miss Mary E. Maxwell and Mrs. Clifford Pinchot.

In London this month there will be held a reunion of the society's British members, including most of the distinguished group of English and Scottish women who have specialized in some branch of geography or its allied sciences. The meeting follows a similar one in September in Paris, when members from many parts of the world, including some Washington women, assembled for the seasons which lasted several days.

Claudel Invitations Out to Meet Petain.
The Ambassador of France and Mrs. Claudel are sent out invitations for a reception at the Mayflower on Friday evening in honor of Marshal Petain and the members of the French delegation attending the commemorative fete of the battle of Yorktown. The invitations are in French.

Miss Elizabeth Jobe, Miss Katherine Yates and Miss Margaret Pilsen will return today from Old Point Comfort, where they stayed while attending the Yorktown pageant.

Wife of Senator

MRS. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN, wife of Senator Costigan, of Colorado, who succeeded Senator Lawrence C. Phipps, has arrived with Senator Costigan and will be here for the winter.

Irma Ruppert Becomes Bride Of Jersey Man

Wedding Takes Place in St. Thomas Apostle to Mr. Hinchcliffe.

Among the interesting October weddings was that of Miss Irma Rose Ruppert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Frank Ruppert, and Mr. William Francis Hinchcliffe, which took place yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock in St. Thomas Apostle Church. A wedding breakfast followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

The church and house were artistically decorated with roses and palms. The Rev. Rudolph Eichman, president of Canisius College in Buffalo, who came especially for the wedding, read the service. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Hilda Ruppert, as maid of honor. Mr. Hinchcliffe, who is the son of Mrs. William Hinchcliffe, of Paterson, N. J., had as his best man his brother, Mr. Richard Hinchcliffe, and the ushers were Mr. Edward Hinchcliffe and Mr. Arthur Hinchcliffe, also brothers of the bridegroom; Mr. Frank Ruppert and Mr. Raymond Ruppert, brothers of the bride; Mr. Paul May, brother-in-law of the bride, and Mr. Walter Berberich, cousin of the bride.

The bride was gowned in a model of antique satin, the bodice and sleeves of old Chantilly lace. Her veil was of cream tulle caught with a cap of pearls and she carried calla lilies.

The maid of honor wore duchess blue velvet made on molded lines with a divided train and an Agnes hat to match. She carried white roses and blue delphinium.

Mrs. Frank Ruppert, the mother of the bride, wore a costume of autumn brown, trimmed in Alecon lace, with a beplumed hat of brown velvet to match.

The bridegroom's mother was smartly attired in black chiffon velvet with rose point lace and a hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinchcliffe left later for their wedding trip. They will be at home in Glen Rock, N. J.

Gist Blairs Back in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair have closed their cottage at Bar Harbor and have returned to Washington for the winter. They have opened their residence at 1651 Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Fowler and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, are at home after an extended motor trip through the South. Mrs. Fowler will entertain at luncheon on Tuesday, November 10, in honor of Miss Fowler, who will be a debutante this year. The party will bring together the debutantes of the season.

The Minister of Portugal and Viscountess d'Almeida have returned to Washington from Bar Harbor and will be guests at the Mayflower for a few days before opening their house for the season.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, spent the week-end at the Shoreham.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. F. B. Wilby will be at the Kennedy-Warren for the winter, where they have taken an apartment. Mrs. Wilby was formerly Miss Dorothy Langitt and made her debut in Washington.

Costigan Here For Assembly Of Congress

Wife of New Senator of Colorado With Him; in City Before.

Among the first of the senatorial hostesses to arrive in Washington and establish residence for the winter is Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, who, with Senator Costigan, of Colorado, reached town a day or two ago from the West, having made the trip from Denver by motor. Without any preliminaries, the senator and Mrs. Costigan "stepped right into their apartment" at the Kennedy-Warren, where they will be for the winter. All arrangements had been made by air mail and telephone, so the task of househunting was eliminated.

Senator Costigan, who succeeds Senator Lawrence C. Phipps as Republican senator from Colorado, is no stranger to Washington, as he served on the Tariff Commission for eleven years, a position to which he was appointed in 1917. During their stay here Senator and Mrs. Costigan became at fond of the Capital as Capital society did of them, and the happy circumstances which bring them again to Washington will prove of mutual enjoyment all around the society.

During the interim of the last four years the Costigans have occupied their house in Denver, where they also spent the past summer.

The Minister of Egypt, Saeed Sidarous Pasha, will entertain at the legation Thursday evening in honor of Miss Marine Jardine, daughter of the United States Minister to Egypt and Mrs. William M. Jardine, who is visiting Miss Phyllis Hight.

Senora de Arlas, wife of the Minister of Panama, entertained at a farewell luncheon yesterday at the legation in compliment to Mrs. John E. Thurston, mother of Mr. Walter C. Thurston, chief of the Latin affairs division of the State Department, who is leaving shortly with her son for Brazil. The guests numbered ten.

Judge William Edgeworth Muse, of Dallas, Tex., is at the Powhatan.

Miss Annie Hegeman, who has been in Europe for some time, will arrive in New York today and will be at the Madison before coming to Washington.

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies has returned to her home in Massachusetts after passing a few days in New York with her son-in-law and daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Cheesborough, Jr., Mrs. Cheesborough and her small son are now with Mrs. Davies for two weeks while Mr. Cheesborough is in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Hagner are passing a few days in New York.

Miss Katherine Appelman Will Marry on Saturday.

Miss Katherine Reeme Appelman, of College Park, Md., has set Saturday for the day of her marriage to Mr. Joseph Cissold Longridge, son of Mr. Robert Thomas Longridge. The wedding will take place in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in College Park, the Rev. Ronald Taylor officiating.

Miss Appelman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Orville Appelman, of College Park. Mrs. Victor Myers will be Miss Appelman's matron of honor. The bridemaids will be Miss Oma Longridge and Miss Margaret La Petra.

Mr. Rex Longridge, brother of the bridegroom, will be the best man. The ushers will be Mr. Harry Orr, Dr. Byron Unstetter, Mr. Paul Saunders and Mr. Victor Myers.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents will follow the ceremony.

Col. Joseph A. Atkins, U. S. A., has come to Washington from Fort Benning, Ga., where he is stationed, to visit Mr. and Mrs. David H. Blair.

Dr. and Mrs. Douglas Putnam Birnie have come back to Washington for the season. Mrs. Birnie will receive on Thursdays as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Madison have come from their home in Charleston, W. Va., and will be in Washington for the winter. Mr. Madison is a member of the Farm Loan Board. They will stay at the Kennedy-Warren.

The Misses Tilsten have returned from their summer home in Maine and have opened their apartment in the Chastleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Riley, of Hartford, Conn., who were married on Saturday in Baltimore, are spending a few days at the Mayflower. The bride is the former Miss Katherine Lilly, daughter of Mr. William Dixon Lilly, of Baltimore. They will spend some weeks traveling before going to their home in Hartford.

Mrs. E. Lester Jones and her daughter, Miss Cecil Jones, have returned to Washington from their summer home at East Stoneham, Me., and are at the Mayflower while their house on P street is being put in readiness for them.

Lindsays Plan Luncheon Fete To Cornwallis

Invitations Issued to British Embassy Party Tomorrow.

A small and informal luncheon party tomorrow at the British Embassy, with the Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay as hosts, is planned to Lord and Lady Cornwallis, descendants of the famed soldier of the Revolutionary War. Invitations have been issued to Sir George and Lady Murray and one other guest. Sir Ronald Lindsay has just returned to Washington after an extended sojourn abroad. He arrived in the Capital yesterday.

Under the guidance of Representative George Darrow, of Pennsylvania, Lord and Lady Cornwallis are visiting historic points of interest in and around Washington. When they leave the Capital, they will motor to Gettysburg and thence to Philadelphia for the Masonic celebration, in connection with the founding of Freemasonry in the New World 200 years ago. He came to this country particularly to attend this celebration.

During their sojourn in Washington, Lord and Lady Cornwallis are at the Mayflower. Over the week-end they visited Yorktown for the Sesqui-centennial celebration, and were among the guests attending a banquet given Saturday evening at the Chamberlain in honor of Marshal Petain and members of the staff at the French Embassy.

Mrs. Langdon Mitchell, of New York and New Mexico, is at the Powhatan.

Mrs. William Sherman Walker, of Seattle, has reopened her apartment in the Hotel Roosevelt for the winter.

Miss Easter Cupp, of La Jolla, Calif., is at the Dodge for a stay of several weeks, and is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. J. H. Cupp, of Whit-tier, Calif. Miss Cupp is connected with the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of the University of California, in La Jolla.

Mrs. George Barnett will come today from Wakefield, Va., and will visit in the Capital for several days.

School Is Sought In Colmar Manor

Parents Point Out Hazards to Pupils in Crossing Baltimore Boulevard.

Asking that a school be built in Colmar Manor because it is too hazardous for the children to cross the Baltimore boulevard on the way to the school in Cottage City, a delegation from Colmar Manor yesterday appeared before Nicholas Orem, Prince Georges County superintendent of schools.

The State Roads Commission was asked either to install traffic lights where the children cross, or build an underpass, but was unable to do either. A policeman at the crossing between the two towns, which are just over the District line, is of no use, the parents say, because the pupils must walk along the newly-widened road, which does not have sidewalks.

Mr. Orem said he would call the delegation's request to the attention of the county commissioners today.

Daughter of Lowden To Be Married Today

Rock River, Ill., Oct. 19 (A.P.)—Miss Florence Lowden, daughter of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, and Dr. Charles Philip Miller, of the University of Chicago, will be married tomorrow at Sinissippi, the Lowden farm near here.

Seventy-five guests, many of them from Chicago, have been invited to the wedding. The services will be held by Dr. Frederick P. Shannon, of Central Church, Chicago. The couple will leave immediately for a two-months tour of Europe.

Priest Is Elected Club President

The Rev. P. T. McAllister Selected by Three Score Ten Group.

The Rev. P. T. McAllister, of St. Dominic's Church, yesterday was elected president of the newly organized Three Score and Ten Club at a meeting at the Young Men's Christian Association Building.

The nonsectarian group of Washingtonians 60 years old and over elected Miss Frances Lee Reeves secretary, and Mrs. Kate Randall Kall, treasurer. Other officers and trustees will be elected at a meeting next Monday at 2:30 o'clock.

William H. Van de Wiele, president of the Progressive Seniors, complementary organization to the Three Score and Ten Club, addressed the group. The latter organization, which draws its members largely from Government workers, meets every other Wednesday night at the Young Women's Christian Association Building. Sunday night a Three Score and Ten Club will be organized at the Trinity Methodist Church in Alexandria, Va.

Government Architects Will Exhibit Drawings

Sketches and working drawings made by Government architects in spare time and in the course of their official duties, will be exhibited by the Association of Federal Architects from October 24 to October 27, in the patio of the Agricultural Building. Many of the drawings are intimately related with the Government's triangle building project. There will be a private view for members on Friday, and on the following days the exhibit will be open to the public. The work will be judged and awards for personal architectural proficiency made.

Betty Gibson Is Engaged to R. C. Fletcher

Marriage of Upperville, Va., Couple Will Take Place This Autumn.

The engagement of Miss Betty Gibson, of Upperville, Va., to Mr. Robert C. Fletcher, also of Upperville, is announced. The wedding will take place there this fall. Miss Gibson is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson. Her mother was formerly Miss Alice Wise, of Leesburg.

Mr. Fletcher is well known in the Virginia "blue grass" section, where he is identified with business, banking and horse show interests of Loudoun and Fauquier counties. He is a son of Mrs. Maria Fletcher and the late Joshua Fletcher, of Upperville.

Mrs. Grace Lincoln Hall Brosseau has arrived in Washington to be the guest of Mrs. Randolph H. Hoyle, wife of Col. Hoyle, at her home in I street. She spent several days in Yorktown.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick I. Thompson, of Mobile, Ala., have arrived in Washington and are at the Shoreham for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson formerly made their home in the Capital when the former was a member of the United States Shipping Board.

The purpose of their visit at this time was to be present today in the celebration at Monticello, Va., to be given by a large group of editors and publishers from all parts of the Union to pay tribute to Thomas Jefferson, champion of the press of his day. Mr. Thompson is vice president of the Press Association interested in the Monticello ceremonies, which have been heralded as the "Freedom of the Press" celebration.

The Woman's National Democratic Club entertained at its weekly forum luncheon yesterday when the guest of honor and speaker was Mrs. Georgeite Ross Howard, current event lecturer. She was introduced by Mrs. George M. Eckels. Others at the speakers' table were Mrs. Mason M. Patrick, Mrs. Abner Drury, Miss Cornelia Bassel and Mrs. Benjamin Smith.

Mr. C. U. B. Hurd, a Washington correspondent of the New York Times, will be the guest of honor and speaker at the forum luncheon next Monday.

Culbertson on Contract

By Ely Culbertson
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

PUTTING AN ACE TO SLEEP.

ACCORDING to popular fancy and, in fact, general experience, the Ace, King and Queen of a suit are certain to take tricks against a trump declaration at Contract. This principle, however, is modified by the time factor which paradoxically, in Bridge as in life, makes pigmies of giants and giants of pigmies. A hand, played some months ago in a Contract Bridge Tournament at Uniontown, Pa., gives point to these observations.

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South West North East
1 Pass 20(1) Pass
2NT(2) Pass 3NT(3) Pass
Pass Pass

1-A Forcing Takeout, although the distribution of the hand is not especially fitted for this declaration. However, the combined hands must hold at least 6 honors and the declarer must be a game at the best declaration.

2-South denies the possession of more than a minimum bid by his notrump response.

3-North is in doubt as to whether to play the hand to take 9 tricks or 11. South's hand may not have protection in hearts as his minimum response might show a hand in which the high cards were the club Ace-King and the diamond King. The notrump road to game seems the safer gamble.

In the play, West lacking a single face card had to desirable lead. The choice was between the two major suits, neither of which had been bid, and, lacking any indication of his partner's holding, he selected a spade. Had a heart been chosen, East and West would have cashed 3 tricks in that suit. The spade lead was won in the Dummy, after which five rounds of diamonds were played and on these East was forced to make three discards. He discarded the clubs and one spade. North then played the two remaining high spades and East was again forced to discard. He could not discard another club without making all the clubs in the South hand good, as the Declarer undoubtedly had at least four clubs originally. Thus he was forced to discard the Ace of hearts. The Declarer, meanwhile, following East in the play, had discarded down to the Ace and King of clubs and three hearts. A heart was led and East was compelled to win. He returned a club, but was again thrown in with his last heart, establishing the Knave in the closed hand for a total of five-odd. This hand, it is true, would also have played for the same number of tricks with diamonds as trump, as the heart Knave could have been established for a discard of North's losing club.

TODAY'S POINTER.

In any long suit the number of establishing long cards is governed by the distribution of its remainders in partner's and opponents' hands.

The total value of the same suit containing identical honor-tricks varies tremendously according to the distribution of its remainders. The law of averages, which is the mainstay of routine theorists, is of little help in valuing any long suit. When holding a five-card suit, the distribution 3-2 of remainders is only slightly more probable than 4-1. Yet the difference in the actual value of the suit is 100 per cent or more.

(Copyright, 1931.)

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Mr. Culbertson will be glad to answer questions on bidding and play of hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of The Washington Post, enclosing a 2-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

INTERPRETS the MODE

Gray chiffon velvet three-quarter coat, with novel shirred sleeves, which is worn as an ensemble over the frock sketched yesterday. (Sketched in a New York shop.)

New York, Oct. 19.

SUPPOSE that a truly great figure in the world of fashion walked over to you, tapped you on the shoulder, and whispered confidentially: "Madame, compose your perfume personnel avec le bar de parfums de Jean Patou!" What would you do first—rush for the nearest French dictionary? Don't bother, I'll tell you all about it. Jean Patou said, "Compose your personal perfume from my bar of perfumes!"

Notice that Jean Patou says to "compose" your personal perfume—not to just find a fragrance you like and cling to that, come what may! But to "compose" it, adding a little of this, and a trifle more of that for one occasion, and reversing the proportions for entirely different results on other occasions. And for this blending of perfumes, Jean Patou presented at the latest collections a "bar" of perfumes—a tricky little kit containing four types of perfumes entitled "Cocktail" which were perfectly blendable, but which could be used individually if preferred. And in this bar was included a sort of glorified test tube affair for the blending, and several medicine droppers to prevent wasting any of the precious essences.

And isn't that a cute trick, really? It's pure bliss to the feminine heart to be able to suit her perfume to the mood or the moment, without violent clashes!

And here's the coat to yesterday's gray crepe maroon frock! Was I not justified in giving it a special place all to itself? This coat is short three-quarter length, which is the Parisian way to express dressiness in a coat just now—that is, if the coat is part of an ensemble. "N" the material is gray chiffon velvet. But its greatest claim to distinction is in the way it is shirred and draped on the bodice, and on the wide sleeves. The neckline permits the red leather flower in the frock to peep through. And is further enhanced with a flat bow lined like the wide shirred sleeves, with brilliant red satin!

Now is the time, my dears, to buy a coat as unusual and elaborate as this one for your afternoon parties—and like your coat, like this one, is really part of an ensemble. It's just twice as good an idea, if you see what I mean! (Yes, you could wear it for evening.)

Indoor-Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PLEASE tell me when to slip geraniums and coleus and the kind of soil in which these plants grow best. MRS. C. M. E. This is the time to start cuttings of the varieties you mention. They require a soil composed of good loam, sand and manure in equal parts.

Can you give me the name of a fast-growing shrub to plant on a dividing line between my property and my neighbors? This is a sunny stretch. I haven't a great deal of money to spend on my yard, but I have plenty of time to care for the plot. Almost any shrub would grow in such a location. I am personally fond of pyrus, japonica, syringa, and flowering almond, but all of these grow rather tall. In city gardens the Japanese barberry is quite popular for line planting. However, I would look over a good catalogue and read the descriptions of the various varieties. Would you do the planting this fall?

Please tell me when to divide a full-grown hedge to transplant in the fall. Unless you have had some experience in setting shrubbery, would suggest that you get a landscape gardener to do this work. Full-grown hedge plants are not always easy to transplant.

Kindly tell me when to expect blooms from a night blooming cereus. Also do the flowers come out after sun-down and then fade the following morning? Also do these plants bloom every year after they reach the flowering age? MRS. M. B. It depends on the vigor of the plant just when it blooms. Usually it does not set buds until it has attained an age of several years. When it once starts blooming, it usually continues to produce several blooms a season. These plants are, however, temperamental. You can not depend on them. The flowers open in the early evening and fade the following morning.

Please tell me of some spray to use on morning-glory vines which are being eaten by some insect. ADELE W. Spray with the following liquid: Arsenate of Lead 3 teaspoonfuls of arsenate of lead powder. 1 ounce of any liquid soap. 1 teaspoonful of nicotine sulphate. A gallon of water. (Copyright, 1931.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed stamped envelope is supplied.

WHEN a substitute claims to be "just like Kotex," ask where it is made. How. By whom. You will find the claim "like Kotex" usually means the pad merely looks like Kotex. That's not enough, when health is involved, as it is in your choice of sanitary protection. There's one way to be sure. Get genuine Kotex. When buying sanitary pads already wrapped, ask the clerk, "Is this real Kotex?" Thus be sure you are getting no inferior substitute.

Wives of Tomorrow

—FRANCES McDONALD—

ALL WELL WITH THE WORLD. EAR Frances McDonald: Thank you for your advice to me. It seemed to be just what I needed. I did just as you told me and I am like a new girl!

You are absolutely right in everything you said to me. I have been away for three weeks. I don't know just when the change came, but it happened while I was away. Just as an illustration, I have stopped biting my finger nails and I don't seem to ever want to any more. I don't mind making my bed, and I even enjoy washing or drying dishes. I don't know of any explanation, unless looking at things calmly, and at a distance, as you advised, showed me how silly it all was.

I flunked Latin last term, but I am going at it to tooth and nail this coming term, instead of the indifferent way of last year. I am going to take up piano again, too, and from a teacher I like awfully well. All in all, I just know that next term is going to be just bully. A lot of my friends are not going to be here, but I am going to keep in correspondence with them, and I just love letters to look forward to. I am going to see my very best friend during Christmas vacation, and another friend has promised to look in on us from time to time.

I must have been awfully upset when I wrote to you.

But next term will be a happy one.

FIRST BULGARIAN MINISTER IS DEAD

Stephen Panaretoff Came to U. S. in 1914, Retired 7 Years Ago.

Stephen Panaretoff, first Bulgarian Minister to the United States, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after an illness of about a month. He retired in 1925 after serving as minister from 1914 and has lived since then at 1868 Columbia road.

Mr. Panaretoff was born in Sliven, Bulgaria, in 1853, and attended an American school in Constantinople, Robert College, receiving degrees in bachelor of arts and master of arts from that institution. In 1871 he became an instructor of the Bulgarian language and literature there and in 1877 was made a professor. He resigned this post to come to the United States in 1914.

He married Miss Lydia O. Gile of Andover, Mass., an instructor at the American School for Girls in Constantinople, in 1892. She died here on March 31 of this year.

Went to London.

He represented his government on a political mission to London, his only diplomatic post before accepting the ministerial here.

His resignation was sent to his government early in 1925, to take effect in March of that year, but Nikol Mileff, who was to have succeeded him, was assassinated on the way to the United States and Mr. Panaretoff remained in the office until December 1 of that year, when Simeon Radef, the present minister, succeeded him. He was well known in diplomatic and educational circles of the city, having lectured at both Georgetown and George Washington Universities since his retirement.

Member of Societies.

He was a member of the Eastern Orthodox Church, the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences and had been decorated with the second and third class Bulgarian Order of St. Alexander for Civil Merit. In the District he was a member of the Cosmos, Metropolitan and Racquet Clubs and the Chevy Chase Country Club.

His son, who was an officer of the Royal Guards Regiment in the Bulgarian army, lost his life in the World War.

Funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock from the Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets, followed by interment in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Widow of General Rests in Arlington

Mrs. E. J. Kingman Is Survived by Two Sons in Army.

Funeral services for Mrs. Eugenia J. Kingman, widow of the late Brig. Gen. Dan C. Kingman, former chief of Army Engineers, who died Sunday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at Fort Myer Chapel, followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Kingman was born in Philadelphia, and came to Washington eighteen years ago when her husband was first stationed here as chief of engineers in the War Department. She made her home at the Kenesaw Apartments, at Sixteenth and Irving streets northwest. Gen. Kingman, who is also buried in Arlington Cemetery, died at Atlantic City in 1916.

Mrs. Kingman is survived by two sons, Lieut. Col. John J. Kingman, of 3530 Edmonds street northwest, stationed at the War Department, and Lieut. Col. Ralph W. Kingman, who is stationed at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

CHARLES H. EVANS RITES.

Government Printing Office Employee to Be Buried in Mount Olivet.

Funeral services for Charles H. Evans, 55, lifelong resident of Washington and Government Printing Office estimator, who died Sunday at his home, 4001 Thirteenth street northeast, after a short illness, will be held this morning at 8:30 o'clock at St. Anthony's Church, Twelfth and Lawrence streets northeast. Burial will follow in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Evans had been connected with the Printing Office for the past 30 years. He was a member of the Carroll Council No. 377 of the Knights of Columbus and the International Printers, Pressmen and Assistants Association. Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons, Charles H., Jr., a lawyer, and John R. Evans, of the Government Printing Office, both of Washington.

Dennis F. Manning Suddenly Expires

Veterans' Bureau Worker Was With A. F. of L. for 25 Years.

Dennis F. Manning, who was 25 years connected with the American Federation of Labor and for the last five years has been with the Veterans' Bureau, died suddenly at his home, 11 Fifth street northeast, yesterday.

Mr. Manning was stricken soon after his return from his summer home on South River.

He is survived by his widow and six children, Robert F., John A., of Wilmington, N. C.; D. Emmett, Miss Margaret Virginia, Dennis F., Jr., and Bernard Lee, his mother, Mrs. Anne Jane Manning, of Brentwood, Md.; two sisters, Miss Anne B. Manning and Miss Frances Manning, and two brothers, J. Thomas Manning, of Clarendon, Va., and William J. Manning, and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert F. Manning.

Mr. Manning was 52 years of age. He was born in Baltimore in 1879 and came to Washington with his family in 1900, and has resided here since. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. Requiem mass will be said at St. Joseph's Catholic Church. The Rev. Joseph Kennedy will officiate.

Charles Webb Murphy Will Be Buried Today

Wilmington, Ohio, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Funeral services will be held at St. Columbkil Catholic Church here tomorrow for Charles Webb Murphy, former owner of the Chicago National League baseball club. Burial will be in Sugar Grove Cemetery.

Mr. Murphy's body was brought today from Chicago, where he died Friday.

Josiah L. Harrison, Churchman, Buried

He Was Elder of Full Gospel Tabernacle; Ill Two Weeks.

Funeral services for Josiah L. Harrison, who died Saturday at Sibley Hospital following an illness of two weeks, were held yesterday at the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets northwest.

Mr. Harrison was well known for his religious activity here, being an elder of the Full Gospel Tabernacle. The Rev. Harry L. Collier, pastor of the church, officiated at the services and was assisted by the Rev. G. W. Gottschalk, of Philadelphia, the Rev. Ben Hardin, of Chicago; the Rev. William H. Ramsey, of the Central Union Mission, and the Rev. L. B. Williams.

Mr. Harrison came to Washington in 1901 from Georgia, where he was born. He entered the merchandising business, in which he was engaged until the time of his death. His widow, Mrs. Ida B. Harrison, of 107 Rock Creek Church road, survives, together with three stepchildren: Loretta N. Edmund D. and I. Newton Chapman, and by a brother, Charles F. Harrison, who lives in Florida. Interment was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

"if WINTER COMES can spring be far behind?"

Yes-VERY FAR

Winter doesn't seem very terrible, perhaps, from where you're sitting now—and next spring isn't so far away? Your memory is short. Think back to last winter and s-h-i-v-e-r!

Remember those cold mornings, when you had to force yourself out of a warm bed, and go chattering downstairs to fix the fire. Remember the jumpy temperature—now too hot and now too cold. Remember the winter colds. Remember the ashes, the fumes, the soot, the dirt.

And remember that you are about to start that miserable cycle all over again—unless you put in automatic gas heat. THEN winter is easy. The whole house always warm and comfortable, no work or worry, no dust or dirt.

But act now, before winter drudgery begins again. It's going to be a long, cold winter if you have old-fashioned heat, but a short and merry one if you heat with gas.

Call NATIONAL 8280, and Spring will be just around the corner.

After Sickness

Why should be interested in your Blood Count

It is a great protection to health and physical well-being to keep the red-blood-cell count up to normal. These cells build and sustain—they also remove impurities.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Weak red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is often responsible for body weakness, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils.

Don't let them count you out!

... take S.S.S.—a splendid Tonic for restoring the appetite and for rebuilding the red-blood-cells

"DEAR, here is good news for you."

"Let me read you a message I found in the papers today * * * then I want you to start on your first bottle which I brought home for you tonight."

Those important precious red-blood-cells that mean so much to vitality, when lowered in count, render the body weak and deprive you of an appetite.

You cannot be low in strength and be happy—let's be happy.

S.S.S. is especially valuable in aiding the system to recuperate after the specific cause of a disease has spent its force.

Its Tonic properties will help the body restore to normal a low red-blood-cell count and by so doing many ailments may be avoided—body resistance increased and conditions of a low blood count corrected.

For generations S.S.S. as a tonic has been helping people gain New Strength, better health and happiness. Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.

Why not start taking S.S.S. today?—the larger size represents a price saving.

NINE CITIES SURPASS CHEST RELIEF GOALS

Address Tells Gifford That Two Lagging Campaigns
Will Be Success.

(Associated Press.)

A report showing nine cities have overfulfilled their community chest charity funds, including private unemployment relief money, was given yesterday to Walter S. Gifford, director of the President's unemployment committee.

The Association of Community Chests and Councils, which is backing a Nation-wide drive to help more than 500 localities meet their own need, listed those already over the top with a combined subscription of more than $1,000,000.

Bart Andreas, public relations representative of the association, consulted Director Gifford and listed the cities and the amounts raised: Duluth, Minn., $213,000; Elgin, Ill., $21,000; Green Bay, Wis., $60,000; Wichita Falls, Tex., $61,000; Seattle, Wash., $607,500; Bellingham, Wash., $44,000; Lincoln, Neb., $180,000; Mason City, Iowa, $60,500; and Richmond, Ind., $85,000.

Two Fall Short of Goals.

Two cities reported falling short of their goals, Andreas told Gifford: Sharon, Pa., raising $112,324 on a goal of $118,400, and Corning, N. Y., with $59,854 on its total of $55,500. They are expected to reach their totals, however.

The association, in a statement, said that largely as a result of the Nation-wide publicity program that opened with President Hoover's radio address Sunday night, public attention is now concentrated on giving as it has been at no other time since the war.

Between now and Thanksgiving in 408 of the 513 cities for which the association is "responsible," it said, separate campaigns will be under way with more than 100,000 volunteers soliciting funds.

Encouragement Found.

Encouragement was found by the organization in reports of the Russell Sage Foundation, based upon study of actual relief expenditures in 100 cities that, in spite of relief demands running from two to two and one-half times as great as last year, unemployment relief has not yet been a severe strain on resources in many cities.

The association has divided its field into ten regions, furnishing each with experts in organization and community fund-raising. These agents have already visited 300 points to aid local leaders in mobilizing for the winter.

First-hand contacts with the field representatives, the association said, "bear out the encouraging forecasts" made recently.

Mining Officials Cited

In Rioting Indictments

Athens, Ohio, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—Lee Hall, president of the Ohio District United Mine Workers, David Watkins, vice president, and twelve Millfield coal miners were arrested today on indictments charging them with inciting to riot and assault.

The charges resulted from the Athens County grand jury's investigation of disorders in a mine strike last month. The defendants pleaded not guilty at a preliminary hearing and were released on bonds ranging from $100 to $200 on each count.

NAMED AIDS AT WHITE HOUSE

Underwood & Underwood.

These two men were appointed yesterday to the staff of army and naval aids at the White House. Lieut. Col. James A. Ulio, left, of Fargo, N. Dak., attached to the Adjutant General's office, was named to the army aid's staff and Lieut. Arthur A. Agerton, who bears a marked resemblance to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was appointed to the staff of naval aids.

Organized, Armed Defiance Gaining in Irish Free State

Dublin, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—The rapid spread of organized and secretly armed defiance of the governmental authority of President William T. Cosgrave caused wide anxiety in the Irish Free State tonight, despite the enforcement of the drastic new public safety bill for suppression of political terrorism.

The government, taking advantage of speedy passage of the bill by the dail and senate last week-end, began putting it into effect without delay to end increasing threats by opposition factions.

Prior to passage of the new law, the government officials felt that they did not have sufficient power to suppress the movement which has expanded from the extremists of the Sinn Fein party and Flanna Fail, to the Republican and Communist elements. Under the new law military courts will be set up to try terrorist political offenders.

The Republican extremists have become increasingly active in demands for complete separation from England in recent weeks and clashes between government forces and members of the separatist factions have led to serious disorders. The shootings of civil guards and civilians alleged to have been in league with the guards have added to the difficulties of the government, while a strong communist element has sprung up in Dublin and other cities.

Thousands of leaflets have been circulated by Communists, denouncing the state, church and capitalists. A strong "antidote" movement has been started, and it was this development that led the Catholic Church to issue a warning to the faithful yesterday.

Perhaps even more serious is the open drilling of hundreds of young men under the auspices of the "Irish Republican army" in the country districts. The government estimated that there are 15,000 rifles and 100 machine guns, in addition to ammunition, hidden in various districts for use by the Republican forces.

President Cosgrave and all other members of the government have been under armed protection for weeks and their homes are closely guarded at night. The tense situation has been increased by bitter opposition to the public safety bill, and by attempts to intimidate members of the dail and the senate who supported the measure. Various deputies living in isolated districts have moved to Dublin to escape the danger of attacks.

Chicago Theaters
Settle Disputes

Union and Owners Patch
Up Differences to Halt
Reign of Terror.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (A.P.)—The two-month dispute between the motion picture operators' union and the owners of 104 small community moving picture houses ended in an agreement today, after public officials had threatened drastic action to halt a series of bombings, sluggings and other terrorism.

After an all-day conference attended by Mayor Anton J. Cermak and State's Attorney John A. Swanson, officials announced that the warring groups had reached an accord on all disputed points, although several more days would be required to put the agreement into effect. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Since the controversy started sixteen bombings have taken place, including the explosion of an incendiary bomb in a crowded theater Friday night, seriously burning a man whom police suspect of having carried it into the place.

CROWD THREATENS SON OF MACDONALD

Police Rescue Youth From Hostile Crowd Jeering
Political Speech.

Tilbury, Essex, England, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—Police guards rescued Alistair MacDonald, son of the prime minister, from a hostile crowd tonight at a political meeting.

The youth attempted to make a political speech but was jeered and booed by Laborites who shouted "traitor," and shook their fists in his face as he departed by automobile.

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—Sir Oswald Mosley, rebel leader of the "new party," was involved in a political meeting fight tonight for the second time in two days.

Police ordered Mosley to go to his hotel after a violent scuffle had broken up a meeting at St. Andrew's Hall. The crowd at one time overpowered police guards, tore doors from their hinges and booed and hissed Mosley.

London, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—The British general election campaign reached a new high pitch today when Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald issued an explanation of the three paramount objectives of the national government. David Lloyd George disclosed the circumstances of his refusal to lead the Liberal party in support of the cabinet and the Conservative party burst out in a new campaign ditty driving home with melody their plea that tariffs are beneficial and "extravagance is a sin."

Adding to the general uproar arising from the bitter election campaign, Sir Oswald Mosley was summoned to appear in Birmingham court on charges of assault and battery arising from a riotous meeting held last night by his "new party."

MacDonald's manifesto to his Seaham constituents said the cabinet hoped to secure (1) stabilization of the pound; (2) some international agreements regarding debt payments which have had such devastating effect on world trade that they bankrupted those who had to pay and embarrassed those who had to receive; (3) a balance of trade for Britain.

Druggist's Statement
Denied at Poison Trial

Lebanon, Ind., Oct. 19 (A.P.)—An attempt was made today at the murder trial of Mrs. Carrie Simmons to disprove the statement of an Indianapolis druggist that she purchased a bottle of poison from him three days before the death of her two children, Alice Jean, 10, and Virginia, 14.

Attorneys for the Hancock County farm wife summoned employees of Indianapolis department stores, 10 blocks distant from the drug store, who recalled Mrs. Simmons as a customer on the morning of the day Charles L. Friedman, the druggist, testifying as a State's witness, said he sold the poison to her.

Illinois Firm Contracts
For Winchester Arms

Alton, Ill., Oct. 19 (U.P.)—Officials of the Western Cartridge Co., of East Alton, announced today the company has contracted to purchase the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., of New Haven, Conn., now in receivership.

The purchase would be subject to the approval of the Federal court in New Haven.

Press of World Pays Honor; Cuban Senate Votes to Send Condolence.

Rome, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini tonight cable congratulated the death of Thomas A. Edison to the inventor's family.

"A half century of immense progress in the field of physical science is bound for all generations to the name Edison," the message said. "His genius belongs to the United States, but his work and his glory belong to the civilized world. The Italian people unite in mourning with the people of the United States."

Foreign Minister Dino Grandi telegraphed the following message to Secretary of State Stimson:

"The disappearance of Thomas Alva Edison aroused particularly the profound regret of the Italian nation. I beg your excellency to convey to the Government of the United States the feelings of keen grief on the part of the Italian government."

Plus Offers Condolence.

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Rope Plus XI, through Cardinal Hayes, of New York, today offered his condolence to the bereaved family of Thomas A. Edison.

"Pope Plus XI, through Cardinal Pacelli, secretary of state, has directed me to present his sincere sympathy to Mrs. Edison and the family in this hour of sad bereavement, while the entire world suffers an irreparable loss in the passing of one of its most distinguished leaders in scientific achievement. Permit me to express my personal sympathy with a prayer that God may comfort the family."

Among others who extended their sympathy today were William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Evangeline Booth and various organizations affiliated with the Edison Industries, Incorporated.

Austrian Press Praises Genius.

Vienna, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The Austrian press praised the genius of Thomas A. Edison today and spoke of his death as "an irreparable loss to humanity."

Hungarian, Roumanian, Yugoslavian and Bulgarian newspapers also published notices of the inventor's death. President Masaryk, of Czechoslovakia, in a message to President Hoover, said:

"Please accept the expression of my country's sympathy at the loss of this gigantic spirit. Edison will remain the immortal symbol of the technical development of modern times."

Havana, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The Cuban senate tonight voted to send a message of condolence to the United States Senate and the American people, expressing sympathy in "the great loss to civilization" that was the death of Thomas A. Edison.

London, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Obituaries dealing with the inventions, life work and personality of Thomas A. Edison illustrated with many pictures, filled a large space in London morning newspapers today.

Eulogizing his initiative and tireless energy, the Times says he had "an admirable and typically American career."

Secretary Mellon yesterday expressed his sorrow at the death of Mr. Edison. "The death of Mr. Edison marks the passing of one of the great world figures of our time," he said. "By his inventions and the improvements which he made in the works of others, he has changed conditions under which men live and has left the world a better place for all who will come after him."

Gold Exportation Halted by Canada

Premier Explains Action to Enable Discharge of Debts Abroad.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Exportation of gold, except under license was prohibited by Canada today, Premier R. B. Bennett announced the order is effective until next March 1.

The action, it was said, would enable Canada to discharge all its obligations payable in gold outside the country, particularly those in the United States.

Gold held in the treasury vaults against Dominion notes, records of the department of finance show, is considerably in excess of the statutory requirements. Approximately $1,000,000 worth of gold is being produced from Canadian mines and coming into the Canadian mint at Ottawa.

Move Started to Name Mrs. Morrow to Senate

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The Women's State Republican Club of New Jersey today adopted a resolution calling on Gov. Morgan F. Larson to appoint Mrs. Elizabeth Morrow to the seat in the United States Senate made vacant by the death of her husband, Dwight Morrow.

Allan Hoover Gets Job as Bank Clerk

President's Second Son Goes to Work in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Allan Hoover, second son of President Hoover, began work today as a clerk in a branch of the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles. Officials said he was "placed in a low clerical position that he may learn the banking profession by actual experience in all departments."

Young Hoover was graduated from Stanford University in 1928 and from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration last June. This is his first job since he left school.

As he emerged from the bank today, the President's son said, "It is going to be splendid." He denied that his taking a job here has any domestic significance.

"I'm not even engaged," he said. He is residing in the Pasadena home of his brother, Herbert Hoover, Jr.

Apples Unhurt by Cold.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Thermometers in various parts of Rockingham County last night indicated temperatures between 22 and 26 degrees, but orchardists said today that unpecked apples had not been hurt. The 22-degree low mark was recorded at Bergeton in the northwest section of the county.

Capital Octogenarian Tells Of "Al" Edison's Boyhood

Franklin Conger, Postmaster Here Under President Arthur, Says Noted Inventor Learned Telegraphy in His Father's Michigan Home.

The author of the following article was city postmaster here during the administration of President Chester A. Arthur and through part of President Grover Cleveland's term in office. He is 80 years old and lives at 1619 L street northwest, having been a resident of the Capital for the greater part of the past half century. On May 11, members of the National Press Club held a reception in his honor.

By FRANKLIN BARKER CONGER.

About three years after I was born (1851) Thomas A. Edison's father, Samuel Edison, and mother, Mary Elliott Edison, brought their oldest son, "Pitt," the Edison youngest son, "Al," to live in the town of Port Huron, St. Clair County, Mich. The youngest son was never known in that town by any other designation than "Al." Nor was the family name pronounced any other way than Edesoon. He was born at Milan, Huron County, Ohio, February 11, 1847, to which place his parents had come from Toronto, Canada.

In 1854 the year that my grandfather, the Rev. Enoch Conger, arrived there from New York State, where he had as a Presbyterian minister, preached to whites and Indians. There the Edison and Conger families became acquainted. In 1849 my father and his young bride settled in Port Huron, and five years later the Edison family followed them.

About all the schooling "Al" had came from his mother, a very talented lady, who while living in Toronto, Canada, before coming to the States, had taught in the high school there. By her he was thoroughly instructed in the three "R's." The first fascinated "Al" so much that he became an omnivorous reader, mastering historical and scientific works better suited to a young person preparing for high school or college.

Tall and skinny, he overdid his physical capacity, and when a friendly doctor spent a night at the Edison home he strongly advised the father to put an end to study and have "Al" go to work. The paternal Edison, much disturbed by this insistent advice, secured for "Al" when he was less than 12 years old, a job as news agent on the newly opened Grand Trunk Railroad, running from Port Huron to Detroit.

Young Edison's "Run."

Two trains a day, one early in the morning and one late in the afternoon, left for Detroit, and from that city a like service was provided. The Grand Trunk line stopped at the Michigan Central Junction, about 3 miles outside of the Detroit terminal of the Michigan Central. "Al's" jurisdiction as newsboy ended at the junction, thus giving him five or six hours of loafing time.

The telegraph keys of the Grand Trunk were in a far corner of the station master's office, and during his forced "loafing" "Al" spent much time in "monkeying" with the keys.

Finally, the station master being unable to keep the youngster away from the keys, ordered him out of the office and told him to stay out. The office doors of stations on this line were cut through about 3 feet above the floor, the lower section being mounted with a wide board.

is engaged in editorial work for a Methodist book concern.

The service will be private, but Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the inventor's celebrated cronies, will join the family in attendance. President Hoover hopes to be present, but has been unable to plan definitely.

Not an Atheist.

For a second time since Mr. Edison's death early Sunday Arthur L. Walsh, vice president of Thomas A. Edison Industries, Inc., said the inventor was not an atheist, even though he acknowledged no specific creed.

"I can't emphasize too strongly," he said, "that Mr. Edison did believe in a supreme intelligence."

"I have seen him hold up a glass of milk as a chemist might look at a test tube and say, 'The Almighty is a great chemist.'"

Mr. Walsh recalled that once as he sat with Mr. Edison in the laboratory the latter said: "Sometimes when I've reached the end of my rope in an experiment suddenly there will come a thought that is the key to my problem. Certainly that supreme intelligence guides the human mind."

Room Is Undisturbed.

The room in which the body of Thomas Edison lay was much as he left it before his last illness. His old rolltop desk, a blue-covered couch on which he used to sit, the long shelves of books lining the balcony, the scores of photographs and paintings on the walls—all were undisturbed.

Close to the desk at which Mr. Edison had pored over many of his inventions stood the coffin. Over it were sprinkled red oak leaves from the trees on the Llewellyn Park estate. Around the room were several vases of chrysanthemums, a few sprays of smilax, and bunches of brightly colored autumn leaves.

Hands of Clock Stopped.

Directly above the coffin was a big bronze wall clock, its hands strangely stopped at 9:27 a. m. yesterday, three minutes after the inventor sank from a coma into eternal sleep.

The soft amber radiance of the incandescent lamp—considered by Mr. Edison his greatest invention—filled the room.

It was into this setting, so reminiscent of the days when the living Edison's vibrant personality dominated the room, that the employees of the Edison plant were ushered at 8 a. m. two hours after the body had been borne from the home under an escort of motorcycle policemen.

Public Is Admitted.

At 9 a. m. the public was admitted, and until 6 p. m. the room was filled. A guard of honor—four Edison employees standing with folded arms at each corner of the coffin—was changed every 15 minutes.

Public mourners numbered thousands and they were polyglot. There which served as a desk to the patrons outside.

Except in cold weather, the upper sections of these doors were generally open. Being forced to stay outside, "Al" could only listen to the tick-ticking of the telegraph keys, but he kept his ears open. One day while the station master had gone to his nearby home for his noonday dinner, "Al" rushed to his house, meeting him as he came out of the door. "Hurry up!" shouted "Al." A freight train has been wrecked up near Mount Clemens, and the telegraph operator has been calling for help.

"So you have disobeyed my orders and have been reading the tape," said the station master. "Al" stoutly denied having been in the office. "How, then, could you read the tape?"

"Al" responded, "I did not read the tape from the outside of your door. I heard the message from there."

Thus commenced the knowledge of sound reading of telegraphy.

Edison's Telegraphy Course.

Much has been printed about the station master at Mount Clemens teaching "Al" telegraphy. I have never placed any credence in the story. Of the many, many incidents of "Al" Edison's life in Port Huron, I will make mention of a couple.

Incidents of Boyhood.

One is, that when Wilbur Story issued the Detroit Free Press in a new dress, "Al" bought about 200 pounds of old type from him, procured an old hand press and necessary "dime," and commenced printing on the train, while going from Detroit to Port Huron, the Grand Trunk Herald.

He caused a great sensation, and secured a big scoop, when learning, just as he was leaving Detroit, of the surrender to Gen. U. S. Grant of Fort Donelson, Ky., by the Confederate commander. "Al" wired to all stations that he would issue an "Extra," and it made a great success.

Another is, that my cousin and "Al" went to Osborne's hardware store and purchased for me a pair of so-called "Stub-Toe" skates. Repairing a nearby pond, I skated with very little water and quite thin ice, they placed the skates on my boots, stood me up, told me to hold my arms close to my body, and they would give me a good start. The start was all right as long as they held on to me, but when they loosened their hold, up in the air went my feet, and down on the thin ice came my head, striking it with a hard bump, and cracking the ice in all directions. The two boys sat down on the ice and yelled like wild Indians. I crawled to nearby dry land, yelling, with rage.

He had a marvelous, powerful face," Fraser said. "The beautiful full forehead, the nose, the mouth, the chin—practically all the great qualities are in that face."

"He had a hand, too, are wonderful. Delicate, sensitive nails and fingertips, yet withal they show great power."

"I was surprised how well he looked. After weeks of illness, I expected he would be emaciated, but it was not so."

Plans are to fashion a likeness in bronze or marble from the mask Fraser is completing a clay figure of Mr. Edison, probably the last made during his lifetime.

Appears Serene.

In death Mr. Edison appeared serene, showing little of the ravages of his prolonged illness. James Earle Fraser, a sculptor of Westport, Conn., made a death mask of the inventor's face and also an impression of his hands.

"He had a marvelous, powerful face," Fraser said. "The beautiful full forehead, the nose, the mouth, the chin—practically all the great qualities are in that face."

Stratton's Death Brings Edison Family Message

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Although grieving over the death of their beloved husband and father, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison and Charles Edison sent messages of condolence to Massachusetts Institute of Technology today upon the death of Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, its former president of the institute died last night while dictating to a reporter an expression of regret over the death of Thomas A. Edison, his friend.

Hundreds of messages from all parts of the world were received at the institution today. They came from educators, scientists and Government officials and from admirers of the great scholar.

Funeral services for Dr. Stratton will be held Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at Trinity Episcopal Church, Boston. Reservations will be made in the church for representatives of colleges, State and city governments and alumni and officials of technology.

2 Bridge Experts To Settle Dispute

Lenz and Culbertson Plan Match to Decide on Best System.

New York, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—An amicable agreement has finally been reached between Sidney S. Lenz and Ely Culbertson for their "bridge battle of the century" to determine which of the two leading systems of bidding is the best.

Lenz announced today he has accepted Culbertson's challenge for a pair match of 150 rubbers of contract, to be played between December 1 and January 15. Culbertson, who uses the approach-forcing system, has posted a $5,000 charity wager that he and his system will triumph over the "official system" sponsored by Bridge Headquarters, Incorporated, and which Lenz will use.

Lenz will have as partner Oswald Jacoby, while Culbertson will play with Mrs. Culbertson.

Civil Service Control Of Postmasters Sought

(Associated Press.)

Attacking the political activities of Republican postmasters in Georgia, Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, said yesterday he would sponsor legislation in the next Congress to place all postmasters under the Civil Service.

"Postmaster General Brown is the dictator from Washington and his orders are carried out by Internal Revenue Collector Rose and the postmasters," Ramspeck said.

Collections to Replace Church Subsidy in Spain

Madrid, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Catholic churches of Spain are taking up a collection to replace state subsidies abolished by recent legislation.

The fiestas of Santa Teresa have begun at Avila and will continue for a week under this means of support. Regular worshippers have paid for their pews in the past but the collection plate is an innovation.

Rev. F. L. Fagley To Address Council

"The Pilgrim Traditions and Present Day" Topic to Congregationalists.

The Rev. Frederick Louis Fagley, associate secretary of the general council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, will speak on "The Pilgrim Tradition and the Present Day" at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, Thirty-fourth and Lowell streets northwest.

His address will be made before a dinner of the Washington Congregational Club. Dr. Fagley was formerly associate secretary of the National Congregational Council. Yesterday Dr. Fagley addressed the union meeting of ministers of all denominations at the First Congregational Church. Later he spoke at a luncheon of the ministers.

Turks Ordered to Wear Turkish Clothing Only

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Turkish officials, from President Mustafa Kemal down, and their families must all wear clothes of Turkish manufacture, the Turkish cabinet decided today in a meeting at Ankara.

President Kemal is required to forego his London tailors, and Ankara women their Paris gowns, as a part of the Turkish government's new economy measures. Salaries of officials will be reduced as one effect of the $10,000,000 cut in the 1932 budget, and duties on imported luxuries will be greatly increased.

Bond Bread now brings you the one SCARCE vitamin!

...sunshine vitamin-D

Read how vital this is to good teeth, straight strong bones and HAPPIER HEALTH

YOUR physician or dentist, or the doctor who takes care of your baby, will tell you that good health, proper growth, sound teeth and strong bones depend upon getting plenty of sunshine vitamin-D.

And yet sunshine vitamin-D is the scarcest of all the vitamins. Your daily food provides plenty of all the others. But even the best diets have failed to furnish the amount of vitamin-D you need.

The direct ultra-violet rays of sunshine itself would be our best source of vitamin-D, if we could spend enough time outdoors. But we can't, or don't. That's why scientists sought a way to endow a food with enough sunshine vitamin-D. They found the way and chose Bond Bread for this great honor. As a result, just one or two slices of Bond each meal now give you all the extra vitamin-D you need. No other bread brings you this health-giving protective vitamin. No other table food gives you enough.

Study the table at left. You can rely on what it tells you. And then ask your grocer for sunshine vitamin-D Bond Bread. It's the same home-like loaf whose delicious taste and firm texture are assured by exclusive Flavor-Peak Rising.

NOEL LIVING OUSTER ASKED IN CYR SUIT

Lieutenant Governor Also Places Substitute in That Office.

Shreveport, La., Oct. 19 (A.P.)—The controversy over who is governor and lieutenant governor of Louisiana became more complex today with the filing of an ouster suit against Huey P. Long as governor and the functioning of Alvin O. King, president pro tempore of the State Senate, as lieutenant governor.

Paul N. Cyr, until recently the undisputed lieutenant governor, filed the suit against Long on the contention that Long is a United States senator and does not legally hold both offices. Cyr also ignored a meeting of the State pardons board and allowed King to preside over it as the lieutenant governor.

The Long faction claimed the undisputed acceptance of King as a member of the board by Attorney General Percy Saint indicated the latter recognized Cyr is "out of the office."

The petition in Cyr's suit set forth that Long "irrevocably accepted" the senatorship when he voluntarily presented his credentials to the Senate by which he procured for himself all the prerogatives, privileges and immunities possessed by senators.

The petition further said "that the said Huey P. Long has received official recognition as senator from the State of Louisiana and for the beginning March 4, 1931, and is so recognized as such senator by the Government of the United States."

"That, therefore, the said Huey P. Long, defendant, is today, and has ever since March 4, 1931, been a member of the United States Congress."

"That the fourth section of article 19 of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana forbids any member of Congress to hold or exercise any office or trust or profits under the State of Louisiana."

"That by accepting the office of the United States senator, said Huey P. Long, by that act, forfeited and lost all right to hold the office of Governor of Louisiana."

The suit took its place on the regular court calendar and Long was given ten days in which to file an answer.

Birth of Son Inspires Call to Australia

When a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Bernard G. Gould, the father was so proud that he had to call his parents in Adelaide, in Southern Australia on the telephone and tell them the glad news.

For a whole week Mr. Gould has been trying to get a good connection with his father's home in Australia, but static ruined it every time the operators in America and England contacted with his phone in his residence at 8081 Pennsylvania drive, Silver Spring, Md. He had almost despaired of success when yesterday morning the fates were kind and a perfect connection was made and for the first time in five years he heard his mother's, father's, sister's and brother's voices. According to Mr. Gould the three-minute conversation with his family was well worth the $45 or so that it will cost him.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

ALTHOUGH a little slow to get started, the producing managers of the country at last seem to have come to a partial realization of the benefits to be derived from alluring their attractions with the "Save Our Stage" campaign being ardently waged by the membership of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America, usually referred to as the T. P. R. O. A.

Following the example of George C. Tyler in sending out Walter Hampden and Fay Bainter in the revival of Sir James M. Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton" as a tie-up with the "Save Our Stage" drive, Sidney M. Elder has received official endorsement from the press representatives' organization of Taylor Holmes in "Salt Water." They also have received approval for their road companies of Channing Pollock's "House Beautiful." The two companies of Noel Coward's "Private Lives," which will start on tour with a night out of the direction of Arch Swayn, also endorsed as certified attractions under the banner of the T. P. R. O. A.

Other important managements have indicated their wish to cooperate with the press agents and to be recognized as part of the movement to restore the road under the T. P. R. O. A. aegis. The press agents' part in the campaign is to get the word out to the public that the road companies are attractions on tour under their auspices, and to lay the foundation for the promotion of guaranteed audiences for certified offerings.

Things finally are looking up for some other reason than that they are flat on their backs and can't look any other way.

Speaking of signs of revival in road interest in the theater, Earl Carroll's brother Jim, company manager of the "Vanities," now on tour and viewed as the business end of the company, the eighth edition of the famous revue, as a sure sign that better times are beginning to manifest themselves.

He cites as concrete evidence for the "Vanities" improved their last previous box-office gross in Baltimore, week before last, by a good $6,000, and then came to Washington to do better than that, grossing on the week a gross $2,000 higher than the company's last previous engagement here.

Incidentally, many members of the "Vanities" troupe day-coached it to New York last Saturday night, taking advantage of one of those bargain excursions to spend Sunday in Manhattan and return to Philadelphia for last night's opening, at practically no increase in cost. Smutt pipples.

Word comes by grapevine from New York that Ed Waite, formerly director of advertising and publicity at the Fox Theater in this city, and later transferred to the RKO-Gaiety, is not happy in his new assignment and is to return to the West Coast, whence he came. Mr. Waite's exodus from the metropolis, am given to understand, will get under way about the first of November.

Well, that's the way it goes—here today, there tomorrow and gone the day after that.

THE THEATER LAST NIGHT

"THE MIKADO"—The Meers, Shubert present Mrs. Schumann-Heink in the two-act opera with score by Sir Arthur Sullivan and libretto by Sir W. G. Gilbert. Staged and directed by Frank W. Shea; production designed by William Barrett. At the RKO-Keith.

Mrs. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Ensemble of schoolgirls, nobles, guards, coolies.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Distinguished by the presence of Mrs. Ernestine Schumann-Heink in the cast, but notable principally for the excellence of its ensembles and male voices, this richly beautiful revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan classic that has endured without diminution of its popularity for almost half a century—it was first produced in 1885—last evening was accorded the most enthusiastic welcome of any production so far offered in the new season.

The tribute to Mrs. Schumann-Heink upon her entrance, upon the fall of the first act curtain, upon her conclusion of her second act solo, "Beaumont's Song," in fact, upon her every appearance in the role of Katisha, took the form of a ringing and prolonged ovation that eloquently attested to the public's esteem of this beloved diva who for period equal to the life of her present vehicle has contributed so magnificently to the art of music.

Great sheaves of flowers were passed over the footlights in her honor at the end of the first act and an emissary of the American Legion even reached across the footlights to bring her hand in admiration on the half of his whole organization. It was a memorable moment, even to one of Mrs. Schumann-Heink's countless triumphs.

Even with less occasion, last night's rendering of "The Mikado" would have been enthusiastically received. From the moment the curtain rose upon the opening male chorus, "We are gentlemen of Japan," it was evident that care had been taken in the selection of the voices to be heard in this perennial favorite. The surmise became a conviction as the evening wore on.

In the three characters of Nanki-Poo, Pooh-Bah and Pish-Tush, played by James R. Liddy, Charles E. Gallagher and William C. Gordon, are splendid voices. Scarcely a number they sang but was encored. Robert Pitkin is a resourceful Ko-Ko who resorts to other means than mere physical agility for many of his most telling comedy effects. He converts the "Flowers That Bloom in the Spring" into a veritable review of the dialects—tremendously out of character, of course, but nonetheless effective on that account. John Dunsmuir makes the title role one of sheer burlesque, both in makeup and treatment.

The feminine voices are a bit disappointing. Marian Palmer is a demure and charming Yum-Yum, whose soprano shows to best advantage in "The Moon and I," when she need not sing against that overpowering group of male principals and mixed ensemble. Patti-Sing is particularly well played, but feebly sung, by Berta Donn. Rosamonde Anthony is the Peep-Bo.

Mrs. Schumann-Heink's Katisha is an amusing creation that omits much of the strenuous business by which the part usually is characterized. Her upper and lower registers retain much of their former glory. It is in the middle tones, in which practically all

Proposals for Relief Made by Two Speakers at Jewish Center.

Eight proposals, seven of them serious, for the permanent relief of unemployment, were offered to the Monday Evening Club at its meeting in the Jewish Community Center last night by M. H. Hedges, director of research for the International Association of Electrical Workers.

After asserting that the failure of distribution to keep pace with production is the great weak spot in the world's present economic scheme, Mr. Hedges urged reduction of the work-week to 30 days, "and keep on reducing until the desired effect is obtained."

He declared that no labor-saving device should be put into operation in any industry until its possible effect on the earning capacities of workers had been studied.

Instead of a "mere half billion" for extension of public works, Mr. Hedges would appropriate at least $5,000,000,000 for such work, particularly for the elimination of slums.

Lauding the new National Credit Corporation as a step in the right direction, Mr. Hedges emphasized socialization of credit as a prime need, and also called for establishment of a definite basis for comparison between gold and silver to permit definite trade relations between those nations using a silver standard and those with gold as their monetary basis.

Mr. Hedges grouped three more proposals under one head of foreign relations: he would cancel all international debts, lower all tariffs, and trade with Soviet Russia, "whether we agree with communism or not."

On the premise that the United States is passing up "one of the most lucrative markets in the world," he urged that the world now be passing out of the individualistic stage of economic make-up into "something else," and urged passage of Senator La Follette's measure which would create a National Economic Council.

Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, of Brookings Institution, declared that the world now is passing out of the individualistic stage of economic make-up into "something else," and urged passage of Senator La Follette's measure which would create a National Economic Council.

HARVARD DAILY URGES ARMY GAME BE DROPPED

This Morning with
SHIRLEY L. POWICH

EVEN in the name of sweet charity, Maryland University refuses to meet Georgetown, when the football game that would bring both nectar and ambrosia to Washington fans.

The proposal was placed squarely before Maryland authorities yesterday by emissaries of the District of Columbia Unemployed Relief Committee and after these gentlemen had left the meeting room the athletic board the formal statement was issued to the effect that Maryland would not play Georgetown because "it must adhere to its custom of not playing postseason games."

Meanwhile, the unemployed of the District of Columbia, whence Maryland draws the greatest share of its attendance at sports contests and the greatest share of its dollars for the conduct of athletics, are unable to adhere to their custom of eating three square meals a day because Maryland must (?) adhere to its custom of not playing postseason games.

Maryland's excuse is as flimsy as the echo of a sigh. There is no legitimate reason for the Old Line's refusal to meet Georgetown, except the apparent fear that Georgetown, mayhap, might win. Maryland, it seems, would rather glory in the supposition that its team might beat Georgetown, which is very well founded, indeed, than put its name to test even in the cause of charity.

Among the most simple matters in the world to stage is a Maryland-Georgetown game, if Maryland is willing. Georgetown already has expressed its willingness to play, and the formal expression from Maryland, the formality of setting a date, and the game would be on with Griffith Stadium donated without cost and a record-breaking crowd of 30,000 in the stands, contributing more than $75,000 for the relief of the needy in Washington. But Maryland refuses.

Maryland officials declared in their formal statement that their "desire to aid in such a worthy cause" and the athletic board to consider the proposition from every point of view. To that end they say a plan is already before the board to designate for charity purposes one of the games yet to be played on the regular schedule, provided the consent of the opposing university is obtained. And Maryland respectfully suggests that other local institutions do likewise.

That was a fine gesture and illustrates Maryland's desire to aid the cause of the unemployed. The proposition has by no means been turned down flat by the Old Line school. And the designation of one of its regularly scheduled games would net a tidy sum for charity.

But how Maryland officials, in considering, as they say, "every point of view," overlooked the efficacy of a game with Georgetown as a medium of aiding charity is one for the clairvoyants to answer. A Georgetown-Maryland game would outdraw threefold any other game on the Maryland schedule. But Maryland must adhere to its custom of not participating in postseason games.

They told it to the unemployed.

Charity Game Barry Loses
Declined by Maryland

Hews to Precedent; Barry's Rally Near Other Local Game Is Sought.

THE University of Maryland yesterday declined to meet Georgetown University or any other Washington college in a post-season game for the benefit of the unemployed of the District of Columbia.

The proposal of the game was carried to the athletic board of Maryland University by George J. Adams, secretary of the District of Columbia Unemployment Relief Committee, who had already obtained Georgetown's consent for such a contest, but the refusal was based on Maryland's custom of not participating in postseason games.

The statement issued by the Maryland officials follows:

"The University of Maryland athletic board met today to consider the proposition of playing a post-season game of football, the proceeds to be contributed to the unemployment fund of the District of Columbia.

"The desire to aid in such a worthy cause led the athletic board to consider the proposition from every point of view. However, the board came to the definite conclusion that, notwithstanding its desire to cooperate in this good cause, it must adhere to its custom of not participating in post-season contests.

"The consideration of this matter led the board to give further attention to a plan already before it to designate for this purpose one of the games yet to be played on the regular schedule, provided the consent of the opposing university can be obtained. And, in this connection, the board suggests that the other local universities do likewise."

Adams Proposes Other Games.

Balked in his efforts to schedule the Maryland-Georgetown game which he deemed the best of the local football attractions, George J. Adams, chairman of the District of Columbia committee for the relief of the unemployed, last night stated that he would attempt to stage one of three other games for Washington.

Mr. Adams today will confer with Athletic Director Arthur J. Bergman, of Catholic University, relative to a proposed game with Georgetown for the unemployed fund. Both institutions have expressed their willingness to play for charity. Mr. Adams also stated that in the event the Georgetown-Catholic University battle could not be arranged, it was probable that either one or both of these colleges would bring an outside opponent to Washington for a game.

The members of the Maryland board are Dr. L. B. Droughton, head of the chemistry department; Prof. J. V. Metzger, assistant director of the experimental institute; Dr. C. S. Richardson, dean of public speaking; Dr. F. B. Bomberger, former assistant director of the extension service and now a member of the Federal Farm Board; H. C. Byrd, director of athletics and assistant to the president of the university.

They told it to the unemployed.

Two-Weeks of Whippet Racing Scheduled at Chesapeake Beach

After a lapse of several years Washington dog lovers will again have the opportunity of witnessing the whippets in action when the Southern Maryland Whippet Club opens a two-week meeting Thursday night on the track near Chesapeake Beach, Md. The first race will be run at 8 p. m. under the lights.

Several years ago the speedy little canines competed in a meet held at Griffith Stadium, but this is the first time that a regular meeting, with a card of seven races each night, has ever been staged in the vicinity of this city.

Seven events, six flat races and one steeplechase, will make up the card each night. Many well-known dogs will race at Chesapeake, among them Whitefoot, Sure Tread, Fast Freight, and Pony Express. A. Evans Bramble, racing secretary of the Southern Maryland Club, has announced that more than 100 dogs have been entered in the various events.

Whippet racing has flourished in Maryland during the last two years. It has also gained popularity with the sporting gentry of Hagerstown and Salisbury, Md., and Ridge Crossing, N. J.

The Washington, Marlboro, & Annapolis Bus Co. will operate a special bus direct to the track each evening of the meeting.

To Give Columbia Winner

Hurt in Scrimmage, Coach Battled Pain to Direct Drills.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Lou Little literally broke his back to produce the Columbia victory that made football history on Morningside Heights by whipping Dartmouth Saturday.

His home for the past month has been a hospital room because his back is encased in a steel brace, and he can not sleep in any other than the raised position of a hospital cot. Around his neck is another brace locking his head in an immovable position. Sandbags are his pillows at night.

All this doesn't keep him off the football field and it did not prevent him from mouthing from the sidelines who took a 52-0 pasting at Dartmouth's hands last fall the eleven that raced out Saturday to overcome the Hanover Indians, 19-0, conquer an ancient foe for the first time since 1899 and paint the brightest prospect picture modern Columbia football ever has seen.

Hurt in Scrimmage, Coach Battled Pain to Direct Drills.

Over a month ago because tackles, like all other material at Columbia, were scarce, the big, genial fellow who as recently as the early postwar days, was a great lineman at Pennsylvania, and for four years coached at Georgetown, filled in against the varsity in an early scrimmage. The youngsters teased him for a loss. But it wasn't until ten days later, when the injury had been aggravated

RUTH PAYING PRICE FOR GLORY

Philadelphia Victor on Decision in Fast Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia heavyweight, jabbed his way to a ten-round decision over Johnny Risko, Cleveland rubber man, in the main go of the arena card tonight.

Risko outwitted him 13½ pounds. Loughran and Risko stepped off with the opening bell to mix it. Loughran hammered away with his left hand, connected for three lets to the jaw during the round, while toward the end Loughran bobbed Risko's head back with repeated jabs.

Loughran jabbed continually in the second round as Risko sought again to shake him off with body punches. Tommy confined his punches to the head, while Risko worked on the body. Again, it looked like Loughran's round.

Risko Concentrates on Body.

In the third and fourth Risko connected for a few more than previously and worked himself nearer an even break for the stanzas. Risko continued to concentrate on the body with few jaw punches, while Loughran mixed them up.

Loughran kept sticking his left in Risko's face during the fifth and sixth, and during the seventh he drove the Clevelander's head back time and again. Risko was making Tommy's body bright red with rights, but failed to slow him.

In the seventh and eighth, while Loughran bounced his right off the stomach, both fighters crossed rights and lefts, while Tommy sought jaw shots with late jabs to the jaw to halt the Ohioan.

In the ninth and tenth round both men resorted to heavy body work which began to show effect. The crowd cheered them on. The bout ended in a fast set-to in the center of the ring with the Philadelphia lad the victor.

The ten-round semifinal saw Billy Jones, 171-pound Philadelphia Nevers, a decision led to Joe Danovic, 175½, Binghamton, N. Y., recently, Jones took a battering for three rounds and then began to come back, but brought him a technical knockout in the seventh.

NAVY COACH ILL.

Notre Dame Team Misses Usual Rest

Anderson Warns Irish of Pitt's Fast-Charging Set of Forwards.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Coach Hank Anderson called the Notre Dame regulars out for a two-hour defensive drill today, ignoring the fact that Monday rest day for the men that Pittsburgh, which will invade the Irish stronghold Saturday, has the "fastest charging line in the East, and not to forget that the Panthers scored 19 points on Notre Dame's reserves last year, and that last year's reserves are this year's regulars.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—A lecture by Coach Jack Sutherland on the mistakes made in the Western Reserve game Saturday, today preceded a brisk workout by the University of Pittsburgh football squad, which meets Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., next week-end. The varsity scrimmaged against the freshmen, who used Irish plays brought back by a scout who has been watching the South Bendlers all season.

Two-Weeks of Whippet Racing Scheduled at Chesapeake Beach

After a lapse of several years Washington dog lovers will again have the opportunity of witnessing the whippets in action when the Southern Maryland Whippet Club opens a two-week meeting Thursday night on the track near Chesapeake Beach, Md. The first race will be run at 8 p. m. under the lights.

Several years ago the speedy little canines competed in a meet held at Griffith Stadium, but this is the first time that a regular meeting, with a card of seven races each night, has ever been staged in the vicinity of this city.

Seven events, six flat races and one steeplechase, will make up the card each night. Many well-known dogs will race at Chesapeake, among them Whitefoot, Sure Tread, Fast Freight, and Pony Express. A. Evans Bramble, racing secretary of the Southern Maryland Club, has announced that more than 100 dogs have been entered in the various events.

Whippet racing has flourished in Maryland during the last two years. It has also gained popularity with the sporting gentry of Hagerstown and Salisbury, Md., and Ridge Crossing, N. J.

The Washington, Marlboro, & Annapolis Bus Co. will operate a special bus direct to the track each evening of the meeting.

G. U. Grooms Passes for Saturday

Mills Pinning Hopes for Mich. State Victory in Air.

Hilltop Coach Seeks Punter for Game in Midwest.

GEORGETOWN'S hopes for repeating its 1930 victory over Michigan State in the game scheduled Saturday at East Lansing, Mich., rest upon its forward passing attack. This was indicated yesterday as the Hilltoppers, badly bruised and minus several stellar players who did not get into the forthcoming game, drilled more than two hours on a series of new overhead plays.

With such back field threats as Wilmer Bradley, Ben Gellis and Russ Danforth on the side lines with various wounds, the Georgetown attack lacks much of being capable of denting the powerful Michigan State line. The Spartan line is reported to be every bit as effective as it was last year when the Hilltoppers, falling of advances on the ground, took to the aerial avenue to score a 14-to-13 triumph.

Lack of Kicker Worries Mills.

One of the chief sources of worry to Head Coach Mills concerning the next contest is the absolute failure of any of his men to do a good job of kicking. Several have been striving for three weeks or more to boot the ball as Mills would have them, but none to date has even approached the standard required, and in their last two games the Hilltoppers have suffered accordingly.

With no one to match Jim Tanguay, of New York U., in the punting department, Georgetown never had a chance to push the Violets into their own territory with the result that exchanges of kicks always favored New York U., which, in addition, had much the better attack.

Against Duquesne the same unfortunate handicap hampered Georgetown, which was favored, on dope, at least, to win handily. But Duquesne during the second half of the game turned the blue and gray back up in the corners with long, accurate kicks.

Yale Starts Work for Army Contest

Flygare Is Lone Casualty of Chicago Game; Long Signal Drill.

New Haven, Conn., Yale, preparing for Army, went through a long signal drill, and a line-up, with one exception, that faced Chicago was used. The exception was Flygare, who was badly bruised at Chicago and gave up in practice on Sunday. Backs and third teams went through a lengthy scrimmage, which the second won, 19 to 0. Hawley, Muhlfeld and Crowley each scoring. Mark Tyson, hurt in the opening game of the season, was out for practice today for the first time since his injury.

West Point, N. Y.—The loss for indecible periods of such backs as Stecker, Sebastian, MacWilliam, Prentzel, Kilday, and Elliott forced Army coaches to look over the scrub back and make some promotions. Stecker, Sebastian, and Prentzel are definitely out of the Yale game, but the others may see some service.

Canzoneri to Meet Chocolate Nov. 20

Johnston Announces Match for Garden Involving Three Titles.

New York, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Jimmy Johnston announced after arranging a match with Sugar Garden's boxing affairs today by closing negotiations for a fifteen-round match between Tony Canzoneri and Kid Chocolate for November 20 for the world lightweight championship, now held by Canzoneri.

Contracts will be signed this Thursday. Johnston announced after arranging a match with Sugar Garden's boxing affairs today by closing negotiations for a fifteen-round match between Tony Canzoneri and Kid Chocolate for November 20 for the world lightweight championship, now held by Canzoneri.

The lightweight crown will be the chief prize at stake, but three titles will be taken into the ring. Canzoneri also holds the synthetic junior welterweight championship. Chocolate is the junior lightweight, or 130-pound, titleholder.

Canzoneri may attempt to make this weight so that all three titles will be at stake.

Johnston this week formally takes office as vice president of the Garden, in charge of boxing.

Fake Admission Tickets Flood Laurel Track, Baffling Detectives

Special to The Washington Post.

AUREL, Md., Oct. 19.—Detectives employed to patrol the Maryland state fair plant during the current race meeting today were trying to unearth the source of spurious admission tickets pouring into the track. The fake tickets first were noticed last Friday, when about 200 were picked up at the gates. A close watch was kept today, and at least 50 were picked up.

A number of the holders were closely questioned, but according to detectives, no concrete evidence was obtained.

It is believed that the spurious tickets, which are bad imitations of the complimentary day admission tickets, are being printed and circulated in Baltimore. Information obtained from persons attempting to gain admission on the imitation passes indicates that there has been a widespread sale of them in Baltimore.

None of the holders of the spurious tickets was arrested, but in order to gain admission to the track they had to buy new tickets.

The officers investigating the situation are under the impression that the counterfeiters are selling tickets of their own design at a price below the track's charge for general admission, which is all the complimentary ticket gains its holder.

WEST POINT CALLED 'UNDESIRABLE' FOE; FLAYS 4-YEAR RULE

Paper Asserts Game Itself Is Obscured by Pageantry.

Laments Four-Year Contract of Teams as "Unhappy."

CRIMSON, Mass., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—The Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily newspaper, today advocated the elimination of the Army game from the Harvard football schedule. Harvard won from Army at West Point last Saturday, 14-13.

The Crimson's editorial advanced two reasons for removing West Point from the Harvard calendar. The first was an alleged lack of common interest between the two institutions. The second was the Military Academy's eligibility rule under which a cadet may not only play four years on the Army Team but may have played collegiate football for several years before entering the service school.

Says Game Obscured by Pageantry.

The Crimson said, in part: "An increasing number of Harvard men, who in the past have looked upon the Army meeting as a major event of the football season are coming to see the fundamental artificiality of the game itself, which is so obscured by the pageantry and precision.

There are two deep-rooted reasons why the Army is not one of the more desirable opponents of the Harvard Football Team. The first is the absence of interests common to Harvard and the United States military machine. The time has come, as the unprecedented lack of palpable interest on the part of Harvard undergraduates in the last Army contest confirms, to clear the Harvard calendar of games with teams from institutions respected, but whose representation on Soldiers Field is regarded as irritating."

West Point Called "Obdurate."

The Crimson characterized the stand of the West Point officials as an "obdurate attitude," and described the four-year contract signed last year between Harvard and the Army as an "unhappy" interference to an immediate solution of the problem. It did not amplify an assertion that the West Point game was "irrational."

Army Athletic Officials Silent on Harvard Case

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Army athletic officials were silent today on the suggestion of the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily, for a severance of football relations between Army and Harvard.

Maj. P. R. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, was not available until tomorrow and his assistant, Capt. L. M. Jones, said he had "no comment to make."

The Crimson brought up the old question of the eligibility of Army players who enter the academy after college athletic career, and classed the relationship between the two schools as "fundamentally artificial."

Walsh, Line Coach of Yale, Injures Leg

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Adam Walsh, Yale line coach, was taken to the New Haven Hospital tonight suffering from a torn ligament in the right knee, suffered while participating in a scrimmage with the second team of the Yale team today.

The former Notre Dame grifter said he felt "very comfortable" and expected to leave the hospital tomorrow morning.

Physicians said he would have to resort to crutches or a wheel chair for a few days.

Campolo Knocks Out Ficuccio in Seventh

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

IS ALCOHOL EVER A MEDICINE?

THE physicians who are anxious, for one reason or another, to keep alcoholic beverages in the list of drugs to be prescribed, are having to do some vigorous scratching. As they look over the list of diseases, for the cure of which alcohol has been used, they find that the evaporation rate has been exceedingly high. Consumption was once high on the list. It has disappeared. Likewise erysipelas, blood poisoning, pneumonia, snake bite, shock, malaria and many others.

The present claims are about as follows: If one is having trouble getting a diabetic to digest and absorb enough calories without causing sugar in the urine on the one side, or acidosis on the other, it may be possible to bridge the gap with a small amount of alcohol. It is not claimed that the alcohol acts as a drug, the thought merely being that in such a situation one can make use of the food values of a limited amount of alcohol as a substitute for sugar.

Another claim is that old people often times do better if they have a little daily drink. Especially is this true if the old people had a mild alcohol habit in the earlier reaches of life. They do not claim that, used in this connection, alcohol has any curative value. They say that old age is not a good time to reform a man. They make about the same claim for people in some other times of need. They say—and rightly—that a time of trial is no time to undertake reforming his alcohol habits.

A claim of another kind is due to receive considerable investigation. Some gallstones are composed of cholesterol. Likewise, in atheroma of arteries there is a deposit of cholesterol in the tissues. In arcus senilis, the white rim of the pupil, that most people say is due to age, is caused by a local deposit of cholesterol. The

Two Mammoth-Oak Gardens Taken in Exchange for Industrial Ground.

BY THOMAS M. CAHILL.

A real estate transaction involving a consideration of approximately $280,000 and the largest reported in the area was consummated yesterday by the offices of Boss & Phelps and Hedges & Landvoigt. The transaction included the transfer by a local trust company of a 100-acre tract of expensive industrial ground at Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast to Boss & Phelps in exchange for Mammoth Oak-Caldwell development building. The latter is a four-story apartment building at 1609-11

CLASHES FEAR DRI FIRST DAY HEARING ON TAXICAB RATES

Valuable Data on Cost of Operation.

KEECH AND COMMISSION
AT ODDS ON ZONE ISSUE

Diamond Stirs Sensation by Refusing at First to Let Auditor Testify.

Frequent clashes between competing taxicab companies marked the opening day of a public hearing before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday in the board room of the District Building. The most intense rivalry appeared between the Diamond Cab Co., on one side and the City and Bell Cab companies on the other.

The hearing, which will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning, failed to produce any very valuable data as to the mileage cost of operation of the zone system. Most of the testimony in this regard consisted of a driver's report proved unsatisfactory because of its inadequacy.

A sharp division of opinion over profitability of the zone system was apparent. The Diamond Cab Co. and the Protex-U Cab Co. were eager for a return to the use of meters, while the City and Bell companies and numerous independent operators pressed satisfaction with the present system if the rate of fare is raised and uniformity is reached on zone boundaries.

Will Favor Meter Return.

The Black and White Taxicab Co. will offer testimony today, and it is certain that its representatives will favor return to the meter system. People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and the commission were obviously at odds during the hearing over the question of whether the zone system has proved successful.

It is doubtful, however, that the utilities body will attempt to abolish the flat rate cabs or will insist upon installation of meters on all cabs.

The session of the afternoon session occurred when Diamond Cab officials at first refused to permit their auditor, N. S. Glueck, to reveal how much money was on hand for damage claims.

After a conference with Harry C. Davis, president of the company, the auditor obtained permission to return to the witness stand and testify that approximately $32,000 was on hand on December 31, 1930. About $10,000 had been paid on claims, he said.

An open clash between Mr. Davis and Albert W. Jacobson, president of the City Cab Co., occurred when the latter was cross-questioning the Diamond head.

Cheers and gasps from a score of drivers greeted the statement by Mr. Davis that the City Cab Co. is not operating a taxicab business, but is renting and selling cabs to the drivers.

James W. Wheat, president of the Protex-U Cab Co., came in for his share of carping questions from Diamond officials regarding the use of the word "insured" on some of his cabs. Mr. Wheat admitted the Protex-U Mutual Casualty Co., which carries most of the insurance, was not yet licensed in the District, though it was organized last October.

Two Cents a Mile.

Mr. Wheat said he favored a return to the meter system, but that cabs could be operated at a cost of 2 cents a mile.

The only concrete proposals were offered by Mr. Davis in behalf of the Diamond company. He submitted a map with five zones to replace the present three and suggested a scale of fares from 20 cents to $1.

When questioned on his meter proposal, he said an initial charge of 15 cents for the first half mile and a rate of 5 cents for each additional quarter of a mile would be reasonable.

Long Waiting List.

Leon Brill, president of the Bell Cab Co., testified that his drivers earned from $4 a day, with an average of about $4.50 on lean days. His organization has a long waiting list of drivers, he said.

When asked for a copy of his contract with drivers, he said he had none with him. Benton G. Potter thereupon brought one forward, with the comment that it is "a slave-labor contract if there ever was one."

Under the terms set forth a driver pays $1,450 for a $700 cab on the basis of $4 a day for 365 days. He is given one day's leave in ten, but if he is absent any longer his contract is forfeited. The driver also is required to pay for gas, tires, oil and maintenance.

Woman Struck by Auto May Have Broken Skull

Mrs. Louise C. Prince, 50, of 3503 Fifteenth street northeast, was admitted to Emergency Hospital last night with serious head injuries after she had been struck down by an automobile while attempting to cross Sixteenth street at 1 street northwest.

Police said the automobile which struck the woman was driven by Charles Pickler, of 635 G street northwest. At the hospital physicians said Mrs. Prince's skull may have been fractured.

Trolley-Halt to Mark Time of Edison's Rites

Washington street railway service will be halted for two minutes during the funeral of Thomas A. Edison as a mark of respect to the electrical wizard.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday granted the Capital Traction Co. and the Washington Railway & Electric Co. permission to suspend service for this short period of tribute. The time has not been set.

Unique Fiddle Tombstone Honors Joseph Brusiloff

Sons Pay Unusual Tribute to Memory of Father, Noted Violinist.

The perfect strains which Joseph Brusiloff drew from his rare old violin passed on last year to some haven of harmonies beyond this earth, but memories of them linger near a bronze model of the "fiddle" placed over his grave in Adas Israel Cemetery yesterday by his two sons, Nat and Leon.

Joseph Brusiloff taught his sons to play, and play well. Leon, former conductor of the Fox Theater Orchestra, now has a band of his own. Nat is leader of a New York orchestra that broadcasts regularly over the Columbia and National systems.

Their "dad," who died just a year ago, wanted the little violin on his grave to be a memorial to his art.

He is saving it for his son, Eugene, now 2 years old, he explained last night.

About two months ago the two brothers conceived the idea for the tombstone erected yesterday. It would be of stone, in the image of a table, and a violin, cast in bronze from his own instrument, would be laid upon the table, just as he last left it.

The National Brass Foundry and the Metal Finishing Co. did the rest.

Joseph Brusiloff taught his violin instructor, not only taught his two sons to play, but other Brusiloffs, near and distant relatives, who have since made a name for themselves and their art.

Artistic high in the musical world came to him for finishing courses, including Naum Blumberg, recently made violin instructor at the Institute of Musical Art in New York City. Prior to his death on October 21 of last year, Joseph Brusiloff lived unostentatiously in a little house at 2117 First street northwest.

So far as is known, the tombstone inspired by his sons is the only one of its kind in the world.

Legacies of $7,000 to American University, $1,000 to the Board of Temperance and Public Morals of the Methodist Church and $1,000 to the Council of Religious Education of Virginia, were disclosed yesterday in the will of the late Merton E. Church, of Falls Church, Va., filed for probate at the Fairfax County Court-house.

Mr. Church, who founded the Falls Church local telephone company, since taken over by the Bell Telephone System, was a director of the National Telephone Association in Falls Church. The $7,000 bequest represented the balance due on a pledge.

He bequeathed $1,000 to the Methodist Episcopal Church of Falls Church, and to his widow, Mrs. Carrie B. Church, he left four parcels of real estate, including a gasoline filling station, encumbered up to $20,000, the Sunset Inn property and a drug store, with $11,000 in encumbrances, and the property now occupied by the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. He also left $8,000 in bonds.

Four grandchildren were bequeathed $500 each, a daughter-in-law $500, and four employees $100 apiece. The residue will go "share and share alike" to his two children, Guy N. Church and Mrs. Maybelle C. Mills, named as co-executors in the will. Guy Church will take over the real estate and insurance business "which he helped to build." It was specified that, no portion of the fortune left Mrs. Mills shall accrue to the interest of her husband.

Following the reading of these reports, several distinguished guests were presented to the supreme council and attending Masons, including Leon M. Abbott, grand commander of the Northern Supreme Council, U. S. A.; Frederic B. Stevens, grand lieutenant; Charles H. Spillman, grand secretary; James H. Brice, active member for New York; Harry P. Ballard, assistant grand master general of ceremonies and also grand lodge of Pennsylvania, and Harold Rust.

Foreign Councils Represented.

The visitors from other supreme councils were Luis F. Reinhardt and Lisardo Munoz Sanudo, of Cuba; Rodolfo Espinoza R., of Guatemala; Rolf Colville Smith, of England; Charles A. Guernard, of France, who is the consul general for France at Seattle, Wash.; Marcel Gutierrez G., of Paraguay; and His Excellency Ahmed Moustafa, Lovisian Ambassador to the United States.

Grand Orator Welcomed.

In a brief address, felicitated and welcomed the distinguished representatives of other supreme councils, and pointed to the happy bonds of amity that exist between the Masons of every nation. His remarks were reciprocated by a number of visiting Masons, including Sir Colville Smith.

Following a luncheon at the Temple Mount, where a wreath was laid on the tomb of George Washington by Sullivan Daoud, of Washington, in behalf of the council, an organ recital, followed by a social hour, was held at the Temple in the evening.

Man Crushed by Truck Suffers Serious Hurts

Serious internal injuries were suffered yesterday by Edward Spaulding, 23 years old, of Brentwood, Md., when he was pinned against a telephone pole in Rosslyn, Va., by a Sanitary Grocery Co. truck. Spaulding was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he is believed to have a fractured pelvis.

Police said the driver of the truck was Ira Sapp, of 939 Grant place northwest.

Dr. C. W. Phelps Will Speak.

Dr. Clyde William Phelps, head of the department of economics of the University of Chattanooga, will address the first fall luncheon-meeting of the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington at 12:30 o'clock today at the Woodward & Lothrop tea room. He will speak on "Credit and Depression."

Man Fatally Injured In Automobile Crash

William Gray, colored, 33, of 108 Van street southeast, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when the automobile he was driving was in collision with a car operated by Charles W. Schaffer, Jr., of 606 Tenth street southwest, at South Capital and L streets. The impact caused both automobiles to overturn.

Gray was taken to Providence Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. He died a few hours afterward. Schaffer is being held at the Fourth Precinct station pending a coroner's inquest.

400 HIGH MASONS FROM ALL WORLD IN CONGREGATE HERE OF NEW STRUCTURE

Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Today Holds Executive Session.

Representatives of Catholic Organizations Present at Ceremonies.

EVENT WILL BE CLIMAX OF BIENNIAL GATHERING

Tribute to Departed Members Paid at Temple on Sixteenth Street.

An executive session of the Supreme Council of the Southern Jurisdiction of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, to be held in the Scottish Rite Temple at 608 Massachusetts street northwest this afternoon, will be the high lights in today's program for the biennial session of the council which opened yesterday.

Almost 400 thirty-third degree Masons from all parts of the world, including a large number of foreign dignitaries, attended the opening session yesterday of the council meeting. The supreme council is the mother council of the world of inspectors general knights commanders of the House of the Temple of Solomon of thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Masons.

At the opening ceremonies Grand Commander John H. Cowles read excerpts from his allocution and called upon Perry W. Weidner, grand orator of the Supreme Council, to pay a tribute to those members of official regular Supreme Councils who had died during the last two years.

Grand Commander Report.

Reports were presented by Sam P. Cochran, of Dallas, Tex., who covered his occupancy of the office of grand commander during the period Mr. Cowles was absent from the council making a series of official visits in South America; Secretary General H. W. Witcover, who submitted three reports covering several steps taken to repair the financial condition of the council; and the grand commander of the House of the Temple, including its newest feature, the "Cowles room," which is devoted to many obituary notices of members of the council, after which attention was paid to additions and other buildings.

Among those present were: The Rev. Aloysius R. Mack, of Georgetown Preparatory School; Father Dennis, of St. Ann's Church; Mr. Leo Codd, Mr. and Mrs. George Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Pope, Mr. Thomas F. Keane, Dr. and Mrs. John T. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Johansen, Miss Isabel Johnson, Miss Margaret Merrick, Mr. M. M. Ramsey, the Rev. Joseph Buckley, Mr. and Mrs. John Phillip, Mrs. William Boyd, Mrs. Katherine C. Ahern, Mrs. J. J. Hagerly, Miss Mildred Merrick, the Colored Auxiliary of the Christ Child Society, the Rev. Alonzo J. Olds, Miss Anna J. Keady, Mrs. Joseph E. Geener, Mr. Edward Purcell, Miss Mary Diger, Mrs. Robert Berberich, Mrs. M. J. McCarty, Miss Anna Murphy, Miss Bernice Knott, Mrs. Charles Tucker, Miss Anna Geiger, Mrs. Raymond Holden, Mrs. George Haugh, Miss Loretta Lowenstein, Mrs. Joseph Seid, Mrs. K. C. Stapleton, Mrs. Miss Teresa Fitzgerald, Miss Eleanor Johnson, Mrs. J. D. Prosser, Mrs. Frances Thues, Miss Margery Powderly, Miss Loretta Murphy, Miss Jane Geagan, Miss Eunice Whyte, Robert Boyle and George Palmer.

Members of Board.

The members of the Board of the Christ Child Society, many of whom were present yesterday, are as follows:

Miss Mary V. Merrick, president; Miss Mildred Merrick, Miss Agnes Riley, Mrs. T. P. Ballenger, Miss Mary E. Barney, Mrs. Thornton P. Boland, Mrs. Robert Cahill, Mrs. D. J. Callahan, Mrs. K. C. Stapleton, Mrs. Mrs. John F. Moore, Mrs. Borrelli Gomer, Mrs. George E. Hamilton, Mrs. J. G. Haskell, Miss Sarah Maher, Mrs. W. J. McGee, Miss Sarah Maher, Mrs. J. Dudley Morgan, Mrs. C. P. Nell, Mrs. John J. Noonan, Mrs. Virginia O'Hare, Mrs. Miss Peppier, Mrs. Florence Roach, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Sands, Mrs. B. F. Saul, Mrs. William Semmes, Miss Rose Shea, Mrs. Thomas J. Sheridan, Miss Anne Squire, Mrs. K. C. Stapleton, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. George Worthington, Jr., Mrs. Thomas H. Healy, Mrs. Joseph Berens and Mrs. Frederick Aitken.

Before representatives of many Catholic charitable organizations, together with leading members of the clergy, the corner stone of the new Christ Child Society's headquarters at 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast was laid yesterday afternoon by the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, of St. Joseph's Church. The new building will be ready for occupancy in the latter part of February, 1932, and will be erected at a cost of $40,000.

A guard of honor made up of Boy Scouts attended the ceremony, which was also marked by the reading of a message from the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore.

A large crowd was in attendance and opened the service by singing "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

Father Kennedy then laid the corner stone after which the archbishop's message was read.

Society's Work Lauded.

The value of the work being done by the Christ Child Society was described by Dr. William Kerby, of Catholic University, who said that the organization was handling a definite social work problem that would help all sections of the city.

Other speakers included the Rev. John J. Burke, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Council; Dr. John O'Grady, of the Catholic Charities; the Rev. Lawrence Sheehan, assistant director of the Catholic Charities; and Miss Anna J. Keady, executive secretary of the Christ Child Society.

At the present time the society lacks the funds to carry out the entire building program, but the main headquarters will be immediately erected, after which attention will be paid to additions and other buildings.

Before representatives of many Catholic charitable organizations, together with leading members of the clergy, the corner stone of the new Christ Child Society's headquarters at 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast was laid yesterday afternoon by the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, of St. Joseph's Church. The new building will be ready for occupancy in the latter part of February, 1932, and will be erected at a cost of $40,000.

A guard of honor made up of Boy Scouts attended the ceremony, which was also marked by the reading of a message from the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore.

A large crowd was in attendance and opened the service by singing "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

Father Kennedy then laid the corner stone after which the archbishop's message was read.
